Ford aide wary that economy will rebound this year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's chief economist today warned against undue optimism that recovery from the recession will begin in the second half of 1975.

Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, testified before Congress, Joint Economic Committee that the economy's downturn came more swiftly than the administration anticipated and recovery may come more slowly than many private economists predict.

"The very suddenness of the decline has made developments beyond the first quarter of 1975 extremely difficult to gauge, but essentially we still foresee a bottoming out in economic activity by mid-year," Greenspan said.

"The timing and the strength of the ensuing recovering is still very uncertain."

Most economists are predicting that the nation's economy will pick up toward the end of the year, especially if, as expected, the government provides economic stimulation through tax cuts and heavy deficit spending.

But Greenspan expressed no confidence that this will happen although he did foresee a turnaround for the hard-hit automobile and housing industries and the selling off of heavy inventory accumulations which have depressed business.

These developments, he said, "should begin to lift total production in the economy during the second half of the year, but the recovery is unlikely to provide much of a reduction in unemployment this year."

Greenspan was more optimistic on the price front. He said wholesale prices of raw materials have been stable since July, compared with an almost 50 per cent increase in the preceding year and as a result a slowdown in inflation may be expected.

Predictions are difficult to make, he said, but "a rate of inflation in the 6 to 7 per cent range by mid-1975 now appears plausible, and this represents a major change in the outlook from a few short months ago."

Greenspan blamed the recession partly on inflation. He said inflation made consumers extremely cautious about making big purchases and caused them to set aside more for future expenses such as paying for a college education.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who chaired the hearing, called for a tax cut and a relaxation of credit curbs to spur the economy. He said this would not be inflationary because "there is no excess demand in the economy."

Forced to clean snowball off of truck at gunpoint

A 19-year-old Placentia man told sheriff's deputies Sunday that a truck driver who accused him of hitting his vehicle with a snowball in San Gabriel Canyon forced him to clean off the truck at gunpoint.

The victim, Frank W. L. Williams, said the incident occurred along Highway 39 about a half-mile south of Crystal Lake Road.

Williams said the man was a Caucasian about 35. He was 6 feet 3, weighed about 280 pounds and had a .22-caliber pistol.

Williams said he was not the one who snowballed the truck but the man told him, "I don't care who did it. You clean it off."

Gunfire erupts at monastery held by Indians

GRESHAM, Wis. (UPI) — Gunfire erupted again today at the 64-room Alexian monastery seized six days ago by militant Indians demanding that it be turned over to them.

District Attorney Earl Schmidt, in his final day of office, said shots came from the sprawling building shortly after daybreak and "some of them were returned."

In Chicago, the head of the Alexian Brothers, a Roman Catholic order, said the Menonites who took over the monastery New Year's Day have ruined their chances of ever being given the 225-acre estate in northeastern Wisconsin.

"If they would have come to me in peace, I would have presented it to the

Tells legislators of plan to push public service jobs

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Edmund G. "Jerry" Brown was sworn in today as the 34th governor of California and promptly announced he would cut back the budget of his own office by 7 per cent and promised no new general taxes this year.

Brown, at 36 the youngest chief executive in 112 years, announced to a joint meeting of the Assembly and the Senate that he soon will sign an executive order to put "hundreds" of unemployed citizens in public service jobs financed by the federal government.

Brown departed from the tradition of lengthly inaugural addresses and spoke from notes for only about 10 minutes in a speech carried live statewide by television and radio.

The Democratic chief executive deplored the poor turnout at the Nov. 5 general election and declared that "more than half the people who could have voted refused, apparently believing that what we do here has so little impact on their lives that they did not pass judgment."

"In other words," he said, "the biggest vote of all in November was a vote of no confidence. So, our first order of business is to regain the confidence and trust of the people we serve."

"I am determined to see this year through without asking the people for further sacrifice in the form of new taxes," he told the jampacked Assembly chamber as his father, former Gov. Edmund "Pat" Brown, and mother, Bernice, beamed approvingly in the gallery.

He also announced, apparently as a trend-setter for other state government agencies, that he will "propose a flat 7 per cent reduction in my own office" budget. This would amount to about $203,000 from an overall current budget of $2.9 million.

While repeating his campaign promise of no new general taxes, Brown, who became the third Democratic governor this century, declared his sup-

Cause of wife's death still not definite: police

An Ontario physician, arrested in connection with the death of his wife in Pomona Saturday, remained jailed today while coroner's technicians attempted to determine what killed the woman.

Dr. Jack Fleming Ostergaard, 47, 524 N. Palm Ave., was reported in satisfactory condition today in the jail ward of County-USC Medical Center where he was taken Saturday after apparently suffering a heart attack in Pomona jail.

Investigators, who booked Ostergaard on suspicion of murder, said that a preliminary autopsy performed Sunday failed to reveal what caused the death of Mrs. Maureen Ostergaard, 42. She had pneumonia, and a lesser ailment, but neither resulted in her death, they said. Toxicological tests, which may require up to a week, were ordered.

Meanwhile, police intended to discuss their findings with deputy district attorneys in Pomona.

LONDON (UPI) — Soviet Communist party General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev is sick but not seriously ill enough to abandon his leadership activities, diplomatic sources said today.

The nature of the 68-year-old Brezhnev's ailment, however, was not disclosed in the reports reaching London.

Moscow has maintained studied silence in the mystery surrounding Brezhnev's health, whereabouts and developments in the Kremlin. Nor have official Communist sources given any indication why for more than a week they have studiously ignored a spate of reports suggesting that Brezhnev is seriously ill.

The sources said Moscow may, however, issue a statement soon to knock down the reports of a serious illness.

The diplomatic reports reaching the West said the Kremlin apparently is going ahead with arrangements for Brezhnev to meet foreign visitors in Moscow in the near future.

early morning hours in Keshena of Menominee County and Fire Chief Harley Lyons said arson was suspected.

The building, which Lyons said had recently been used as a headquarters for the American Indian Movement, was destroyed. No injuries were reported.

Authorities and the Indians had agreed to a cease-fire Sunday, but gunfire broke out during the night. No injuries were reported, however.

The Indians—about 50 men, women and children—took over the abandoned novitiate and demanded the building and surrounding area be returned to the Menominee Tribe.

There was no evidence, however, that the land had belonged to the tribe, at least since the 1850s.

An explosion and fire swept an abandoned two-story building during the port to wipe out tax "privileges of the few."

He said he would support repeal of the oil depletion allowance, abolition of the property tax break for California-based insurance company headquarters and would propose a "realistic" minimum tax on preferential income.

Targeting unemployment as one of his chief priorities, Brown said he soon will sign an executive order "requiring every state agency and department to actively participate in federally funded public service programs. Before the month is out, hundreds of men and women who are on unemployment or welfare will be performing meaningful jobs."

Brown, who took the oath as a cold drizzle fell outside the Capitol, spoke from the Assembly rostrum and told the lawmakers, "I probably won't come again to this rostrum for awhile. Matter of fact, I wasn't sure I was going to make it. I don't think my father thought I was going to make it, either."

Brown repeated his call for passage of legislation to extend unemployment insurance to California farm workers and urged passage of a secret ballot law for farm worker union representation elections.

Edmund G. Brown Jr., is sworn in as California's 34th governor by state Supreme Court Justice Donald R. Wright. The ceremony was held this morning in the Assembly chambers.

11 cents an ounce and up

Bidding for U.S. gold off to a slow start

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 300 persons and firms, including one who offered 11 cents an ounce, submitted bids today in the government's first public gold auction in this century.

O. B. Stouffer, U.S. director of Surplus Disposal, said the federal government reserves the right to reject any offers that are unsuitable.

The first bid opened was submitted by the New York firm of Austern and Paul, Inc., offering $156 per ounce for one 400-ounce brick of gold.

The second bid was from Vito DeMa-rino of San Diego, Calif., who offered $45.10 for a brick, about 11 cents an ounce.

None of the early bidders sought to buy more than one 400-ounce brick.

Larger bids were expected, however, before the auction ends today. The government was not expected to decide what bids to accept for several days.

As the auction was taking place, the price of gold on the Paris and London markets fell as dealers awaited the outcome of the U.S. bidding.

The morning fixing in London was $173 an ounce. In Zurich the price was $174, up $5 over the weekend. In Paris, gold closed at $179.50, down from Friday's $182.73.

At the auction, Dewitt Alexandre Jr., a metals salesman for Bach & Co., of New York, submitted bids for the New York investment house.

About a dozen bids were submitted by hand before the auction began including one from Eugene A. D'Onofrio, 33, a Baltimore gas station owner. D'Onofrio submitted a six-inch wad of cash with his offer.

"I thought I'd take a gamble," said

D'Onofrio when asked why he was bidding.

An official of the General Services Administration, which was handling the auction on behalf of the Treasury Department, said the number of bids received was about 300. The official said 300 bids is not a particularly active auction.

Five GSA employees gathered around a plain table opening the sealed bids. The bricks auctioned are 99.9 per cent pure gold. Experts said it would take a minimum of $65,000 to get one.

Moscow silent on Brezhnev illness

The reports of Brezhnev's illness followed the indefinite postponement last weekend of Brezhnev's scheduled mid-January summit with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat. Official Arab sources said the postponement was due solely to Brezhnev's ill health. Moscow gave no reasons.

Since then, various reports, many of them from the Arab world, said Brezhnev is in the hospital, suffering from bronchitis.

One report said Brezhnev was suffering from Leukemia. Another suggested Brezhnev is about to be replaced in a quiet, orderly changeover in the Kremlin.

But diplomatic sources said although the Soviet leader seems to be unwell, there are no indications that he is gravely ill.

They said Brezhnev called off the summit in Cairo with Sadat for political reasons, leaving the door open for a possible later meeting.

'Airship' balloons break off, aborting ocean flight

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — Malcolm Forbes, planned 7,000-mile balloon flight to Europe was aborted before dawn today when the four tiers of helium-filled balloons broke apart.

Forbes said he will immediately plan another flight to be launched before the end of February.

Forbes, 55, and aerospace scientist Thomas Heinshiemer, 35, were inside the gondola, "Windborne," when the balloons snapped free. The gondola was dragged about 20 feet across the tarmac of the Marine Corps helicopter base here, but neither man was hurt.

Forbes said they have the nylon to make more balloons and the high altitude weather will be adequate until the end of February.

He said the Windborne, which was not damaged although it ended up on its top, could be ready to go again in 30 days.

Forbes, publisher of a business magazine, and Heinshiemer, of Rolling Hills, Calif., had planned four previous takeoffs since Dec. 27.

Gusty surface winds delayed the flight three times. A faulty communications system further delayed the flight early Saturday.

It was scheduled for launching into the jetstream 40,000 feet above the earth Sunday morning and was again postponed by unfavorable winds.

Early today, Forbes said the weather was good and he was ready to go, and quickly began a countdown.

$1,000 reward offered for arrest of cabbie's attacker

The step-father of cab driver Rodger Carter Johnson has offered a $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the man who shot and paralyzed Johnson Dec. 27 in Claremont.

The reward was put on permanent deposit in a Claremont bank by Dr. Gordon L. Barclay, psychologist and managing director of the Research Foundation for Mental Hygiene in Albany, N.Y.

Meanwhile, Johnson, a former student at the Claremont Graduate School, was reportedly improved in Pomona Valley Community Hospital's intensive care unit. His breathing has improved and he is alert, authorities said, but he remains paralyzed.

The victim, 32, was shot in the back in a robbery attempt at an apartment complex at 680 W. San Jose Ave. He was working as a taxi driver and had gone there to pick up a fare.

Barclay, who flew here after the shooting, said he was offering the cash in hope someone will supply police with the name of Johnson's assailant. Police said they would keep the name of any informant confidential.

Alternate juror says Watergate jury kept from news during trial

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An alternate juror in the Watergate cover-up trial says there was "no way possible" for the jurors to have seen or heard news accounts about Watergate developments while they were sequestered.

Joanne L. Williams said marshals always were present while the jurors watched television, and newspapers were clipped so heavily as to look like "rag doll papers."

"Sometimes you saw more air than paper when you held them up," she said.

Mrs. Williams said she did not learn of Richard M. Nixon's illness until a reporter told her after the trial. She said the question of whether the former President would testify "crossed my mind" but assumed the lawyers had a reason for not calling him.

A free-lance model and housewife who celebrated her 24th birthday during the trial, Mrs. Williams reflected on life as a juror during an interview. She stood out among the 17 jurors and alternates because of her chic attire and varied hair styles.

She plans to continue her modeling.

As sons Alvin, 5, and Erik, 4 — cared for by their grandmother during the trial — played among Christmas decorations, Mrs. Williams told of the kinship that grew among the jurors.

"All of us were strangers when we got together," she said. "All of us got along just like a family. The only time we were sad was on holidays."

Mrs. Williams said there were no arguments, each one took part in decisions, and no juror emerged as the leader during their 79 days of sequestration.

She said several jurors contributed ideas for the letter asking U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica not to hold court Saturday but, in the interest of justice, not objecting to the trial continuing past Christmas.

Each day began about 6 a.m. when a marshal knocked on their doors, Mrs. Williams said. They ate breakfast together in a separate room, then went by chartered bus to the courthouse. They returned to the hotel each afternoon, freshened up and ate dinner together, again in a separate room.

The evenings didn't drag, Mrs. Williams said. They played games, and some of the women knitted. Mrs. Williams said she learned to knit, and made a hat, matching cape and booties "for myself," she laughed.

The jurors watched television in a special room. Always, she said, male and female marshals were present, adding "there was no way possible we could have seen anything relating to the trial."

On Saturdays the jurors went home — with a marshal — for a few hours to do laundry and shopped. "Sunday was the only time to relax," she said.

Mrs. Williams said the jurors "plan to be in touch — have a reunion," she laughed.

On the trial, Mrs. Williams ventured few opinions. "I had no particular views one way or the other because I knew the final verdict wasn't up to me," she said.

Of the defendants, Mrs. Williams said, "I can't say how they got into their predicament." Nixon's language on the White House tapes shocked her, but she gained "no particular impression" of him.

In a way, he neglected some duties and didn't live up to certain of them," said Mrs. Williams, a registered Democrat who did not vote in 1972. "If he were running for President again, he wouldn't get my vote."

Auto industry starts first week of 1975 in very depressed state

DETROIT (UPI) — The U.S. auto industry launched the first full week of 1975 production today with 14 assembly plants closed, 140,000 workers on long-term layoffs and reports showing steadily dropping car sales.

Preliminary figures indicated December sales of 430,000 domestic-built cars, a 25 per cent drop from last December's gasoline-pinch sales and 40 per cent below 1972's record December. The final figures were to be released late today.

December sales were the lowest for any month since December of 1970, when a strike against General Motors cut deeply into deliveries. They finished 1974 domestic car production with a 7.45 million total, the lowest since strike affected 1970.

Industry analysts said sales showed little sign of improvement in December. They added the dropoff from November was not as great as the usual 25 per cent. This past December saw deliveries drop about 15 per cent from slack November sales.

December may not have been the absolute bottom for sales, but at least it didn't follow the traditional year end pattern, one industry analyst said. "That really would have been disastrous."

Besides the 140,000 workers on open-ended layoffs this week, another 40,000 were idled temporarily at the 11 car and three truck assembly plants that were shut and thousands more were off the job at manufacturing plants.

Ford Motor Co. kept six car and one truck assembly plant closed, Chrysler two car and two truck plants, GM two car plants and American Motors one car plant to begin changeover to its new sporty Pacer.

The industry already has scheduled first quarter production at the lowest point in 14 years. Layoffs through March will put at least 160,000 workers on indefinite layoffs and another 10,000 on short layoffs from one to six weeks — about 40 per cent of the industry's hourly work force.

The industry closely guards the actual number of salaried workers who have lost their jobs because of slumping sales, but authoritative sources estimate 26,000 white collar workers — about 20,000 at Chrysler — are out of work.

Both industry and union officials agree many workers will not return to their jobs until there is an upturn in new car sales. Ward's Automotive Reports, the industry's statistical publication, in an earlier prediction said automakers have not faced such potentially depressed car market since the 1930s.

Your income tax

By RAY DE CRANE

Big tax news was made last year even without the passage of a new income tax law by Congress. These were among the major changes:

The Pension Reform Act of 1974, signed into law by President Gerald Ford last Labor Day, could affect the tax planning of an estimated 40-million Americans.

A new ruling by Internal Revenue Service permits thousands who have been forced into early retirement because of a disability to claim up to $5,200 a year in sick pay benefits. This right formerly had been denied them.

Even more important, perhaps, is the right granted to disabled retirees to amend their tax returns for the last three years and to receive substantial refunds because of this new policy on sick pay.

The optional automobile expense deduction for those employees required to use their car in their work has been increased to 15 cents a mile for each of the first 15,000 miles and 10 cents a mile thereafter. A year ago the figures were 12 cents and nine cents, respectively.

At the same time the allowable transportation expense in seeking medical care or in connection with charitable activities has been raised to seven cents a mile from the former six cents.

This is the first installment in a 14-part series outlining the highlights of your 1974 income tax return. Save them all for future references, or order now your personal copy of How To Save Money on 1975 Taxes to receive not only all the information but also filled-in sample forms.

The tax consequences of the new retirement program are so important that two chapters in the series will be devoted to them. The first of them appears tomorrow.

Ford names committee

House unit also plans to investigate the CIA

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Lucien H. Nedzi, D-Mich., says his House subcommittee will conduct its own investigation of charges the Central Intelligence Agency illegally spied on Americans, no matter what the Justice Department and President Ford's committee do.

"We intend to go ahead ... as soon as the new Congress has organized itself," Nedzi told UPI Sunday.

He said the investigation would "very definitely" focus on charges the CIA spied upon dissidents in the United States and that he expected the agency's charter to be tightened to ensure that it confined its activities to foreign intelligence gathering.

This would make the third probe of CIA activities. Working in secrecy, the agency's old rival, the Justice Department, has begun its own probe, and Ford named Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller to head a conservative "blue ribbon" panel.

Nedzi's intelligence subcommittee is one of two given regular briefings on CIA activities. In response to a statement by Rep. John Brademas, D-Ind., that he thinks there is "a congressional failure" in keeping tabs on the CIA, the chairman said:

"Historically, that is probably true." He said his subcommittee got the authority to oversee the CIA two years ago.

"Since that time," Nedzi added, "I think we've had very adequate oversight. The CIA has been reporting on its activities regularly, almost daily, and it has to be remembered that most of the (domestic spying) activities charge occurred before that time."

Ford announced the membership of his panel Saturday to "ascertain and evaluate any facts relating to activities conducted within the United States by the Central Intelligence Agency that give rise to questions as to whether the agency has exceeded its statutory authority."

Th appointments were made Sunday. They are:

—Rockefeller, also a member of the Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. He is close to Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, whose "4 Committee" gives the CIA its day-to-day direction.

—C. Douglas Dillon, Treasury secretary under Presidents Kennedy and Eisenhower. The New York Times reported that Dillon, acting secretary of state in 1960, said the U2 spy plane was shot down on a weather mission over the Soviet Union.

—Gen. Lynn L. Lemnitzer, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff during the CIA-sponsored invasion of Cuba that founded at the Bay of Pigs.

—Erwin N. Griswold, former solicitor general.

—Joseph Lane Kirkland, secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO.

—John T. Connor, a former secretary of commerce. The Washington Post said Connor was a Marine intelligence officer in 1944.

—Ronald Reagan, the former governor of California who has announced plans to become a conservative columnist and broadcaster.

—Edgar F. Shannon, former president of the University of Virginia.

Administration sources said CIA Director William E. Colby asked Ford for the FBI investigation in his 50-page report on the allegations, first made in the Dec. 22 New York Times. White House officials said the Justice Department investigation had been underway "for the past few days" but neither FBI nor Justice officials would comment.

There were new published reports Sunday on CIA activity. Newsweek magazine said agency officials were "worried that further investigation might unveil the size and range of the CIA's network of 'agency proprieties,' cover organizations and active CIA alumni through which much of its domestic surveillance against anti-war dissidents was carried out."

The New York Times said it acquired a CIA-written report which contained extensive and often derogatory gossip on singer Eartha Kitt but no evidence of foreign intelligence connections. The newspaper said the Secret Service requested the report after Miss Kitt criticized the Vietnam War during a White House luncheon in 1968.

Proxmire doubts Ford unit will be thorough

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said today President Ford's special commission to investigate allegations against the CIA is unlikely to do a thorough job because some members have been connected with intelligence operations in the past.

"I think that panel is unlikely to give the vigorous, adversary, critical analysis of CIA activities that we are supposed to get," Proxmire said.

Some other influential members of Congress disagreed.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said the eight-member panel is made up of "distinguished men without personal axes to grind — men of great national reputation."

But Scott added that separate congressional investigations of the CIA will still be conducted beginning when Congress convenes next week.

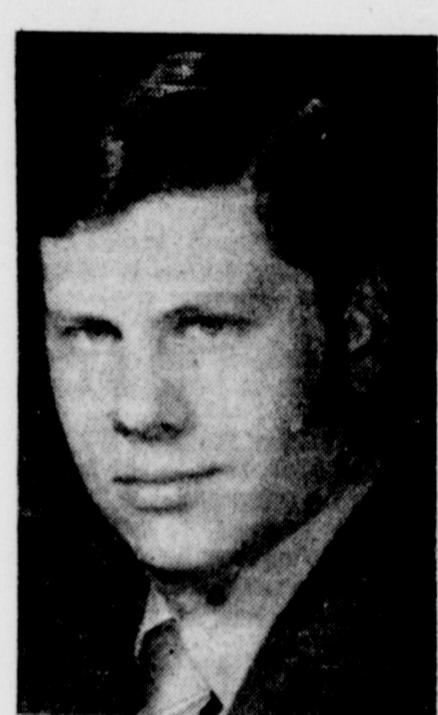

Rep. Lucien N. Nedzi, D-Mich., chairman of the House Intelligence subcommittee over-seeing the Central Intelligence Agency, said his panel will start the probe "as soon as the new Congress has organized itself."

Sen. Howard Baker Jr., R-Tenn., commended Ford for appointing the panel, but also said the commission's actions would not reduce the need for independent congressional action.

Proxmire, who was interviewed on the CBS Morning News, said, "We want to learn what the CIA has been up to ... I think we have to find out. I don't think the panel appointed by President Ford will do this, however."

He said that some of the panel members, especially Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller who is the chairman, have had a connection "one way or another" with intelligence operations.

Convict stabbed at San Quentin

SAN QUENTIN (UPI) — A convict from Los Angeles has become the first stabbing victim of the year at San Quentin Prison.

Roy Ballesteros, imprisoned on a narcotics conviction, was in guarded condition at Marin County General Hospital Sunday after the stabbing incident Saturday.

Prison authorities said a guard fired warning shots into the air to break up a fight involving three men, including Ballesteros.

Supertanker aground off Singapore

Million gallon oil spill

SINGAPORE (UPI) — The 237,698-ton Japanese supertanker Showa Maru ran aground about five miles southeast of Singapore harbor today, and an estimated one million gallons of crude oil poured out of its ruptured tanks.

The Showa Maru, bound from the Persian Gulf to Japan, ran aground half a mile west of Buffalo Rock in the Singapore Strait at daybreak.

By midafternoon, Port of Singapore authorities said the ship master had reported that some 4,500 kiloliters (approximately one million gallons of crude) had poured out of three ruptured tanks.

The island republic's maritime authorities put out an urgent oil pollution alert and sent fire fighting ships to spray detergents on the spreading oil slicks.

Another envoy missing

U.S. diplomat murdered north of Saigon

SAIGON (UPI) — The U.S. Embassy reported today an American diplomat assigned to a one-man post northeast of Saigon apparently has been murdered in an explosion in his home. Another diplomat was reported missing aboard an Air American plane that disappeared over the Central Highlands.

An embassy statement said William E. Bennett, 36, was killed when an explosion blasted the pantry of his home

Both the Singapore Defense Ministry and the Ministry of Environment were placed on standby alert should the spilled oil reach the beaches.

Port officials said one oil slick over one-mile-long had drifted into the outer reaches of Singapore port.

Port authorities told UPI that oil slicks had already reached some of the small islands south of Singapore, and prevailing currents threatened to push oil slicks ashore near Jurong, on Singapore island's west coast.

Today's spill was believed to be the first of such a magnitude in the area and could well cause serious pollution on the beaches of three countries — Singapore, Malaysia and Indonesia.

The Japanese government said in Tokyo it was preparing for action to counter the effects of the spill.

Government sources said the Foreign Ministry had contacted the Japanese Embassy in Singapore and had also talked to a Tokyo shippers organization about the possibility of rushing oil fences and chemical neutralizers to the scene of the accident.

Taiheiyo Kaiun Co. of Tokyo, one of the owners of the supertanker decided tonight to send a three-man party to Singapore Tuesday to check the damage.

A salvage company spokesman told UPI that a smaller tanker would pump off some of the Showa Maru's remaining oil cargo Tuesday in an effort to lighten and refloat the stricken vessel.

Six salvage tugboats were standing by to assist the attempt to get the Showa Maru off the coral reefs and rocks where it went aground.

CRASH AFTERMATH MYSTERY

This is the bus crash which claimed life of driver Douglas Moore last year along with 12 passengers.

Mystery safe deposit box clouds crash probe

HAYWARD (UPI) — A mysterious safe deposit box held by a bank in the name of a Greyhound driver killed with 12 passengers in a bus crash one year ago will be the subject of a court hearing Tuesday in Hudson, Wis.

Speculation has it that the box may contain the medical records of the driver, Douglas Moore, 26, who lived with his sister, Mrs. Jayce McGowan in this east San Francisco Bay suburb. Lawsuits totaling some $40 million have been filed against Greyhound as a result of the unexplained crash.

But adding to the mystery about the safe deposit box were reports cited by the Oakland Tribune that persons have called from Canada and England, as well as one person who reportedly said he was with the CIA, to ask that the box remain sealed. Mrs. McGowan said she first heard of the mysterious safe deposit box several weeks ago when a man identifying himself as a Greyhound investigator asked permission to open it inside the First National Bank of Hudson.

She said she had not heard of the box before, but would give her permission if a member of the family is present when the box is opened. Moore was not married.

The box has been rented for 10 years to a man who gave the name W. B. Lee. He reportedly left the bank addresses in Berkeley, Minneapolis and London, she said.

It was sealed until the court hearing to show cause why Greyhound should not be allowed to inspect its contents.

Watergate prosecutor says

Nixon had no prior knowledge of break-in

NEW YORK (UPI) — James Neal, the chief prosecutor in the Watergate conspiracy trial, believes former President Nixon had no prior knowledge of the bugging and break-in, according to the current issue of Time magazine.

The Time article said that Neal based his opinion on "some surprise on Nixon's part" when he was informed of the Watergate affair.

Neal said that according to the June 23, 1972 tape, when Nixon was told by H. R. Haldeman about the break-in, the former president wondered out loud about who had been responsible.

Neal quoted the tape wherein Nixon said "Who was the — that did it? Was it Gordon Liddy?"

On New Year's Day the Watergate jury found John N. Mitchell and three others — Haldeman, the former White House chief of staff; John D. Ehrlichman, the former White House domestic affairs chief; and Robert C. Mardian, once the assistant attorney general in charge of the Justice Department's Internal Security Division — guilty of conspiracy. Another defendant, Kenneth W. Parkinson, a lawyer hired by Nixon's re-election committee after the break-in, was found not guilty.

Asked for his opinion of the guilty defendants and others who pleaded guilty, Neal told Time:

These are not evil men. There was no one in control. There was no czar. But men who become convinced their cause is just, resort to means to attain in that they otherwise would not consider.

Ford vetoes his own name

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford's 27th and final veto of bills passed by last year's Congress went on legislation to name the post office in his home town the "President Gerald R. Ford Federal Office Building."

Vetoing the measure just before Saturday's deadline, Ford expressed his appreciation to Congress, but said the U.S. Court House and Federal Office building in Grand Rapids, Mich., will not get a name change.

Ford may ask $10-$15 billion income tax cut, fuel tax hike

NEW YORK (UPI) — President Ford, in his State of the Union message next month, will ask for an income tax cut between $10 billion and $15 billion, Time magazine reported Sunday.

The move is aimed at injecting purchasing power into the economy as the administration comes around to the view that "recession has replaced inflation as the U.S.'s No. 1 economic problem."

The news magazine also said the tax-cut proposal would be coupled with an energy conservation package built around excise taxes on crude oil and natural gas. The administration believes such a move would help reduce U.S. dependence on imported oil.

According to Time, Ford and his advisers in meeting held in Vail, Colo., ruled out both an increase in gasoline taxes and gas rationing.

"Basically, what emerged from Vail," the magazine said, "was a general agreement within the administration to deal with the import problem through a market approach. In essence, that means reliance on higher oil prices to encourage both a reduction in consumption and a sharp step-up in efforts to develop new domestic sources of crude oil."

A rise in prices would be achieved in part through a removal of controls on the cost of domestic crude but the main tool would be excise taxes paid by oil companies on all natural gas and crude oil refined in the United States.

Aussie bridge collapse kills five, ship that hit span, sinks in 10 minutes

HOBART, Australia (UPI) — Frank and Sylvia Manley were driving over the mile-long bridge with their teenage daughter Sharon when 250 feet of the concrete span crumbled.

"The bridge has gone!" Mrs. Manley screamed out as the rubble fell 150 feet into the Derwent River on the island of Tasmania.

"I hit the brakes but it was too late," Manley said. "The front of the car went over the bridge."

A freighter rammed into the Tasman Bridge Sunday night, shattering the concrete span. Rescue workers recovered five bodies but said up to 14 others might have perished. Thirty-two persons were injured.

Police said at least four autos fell into the 90-foot-deep river. The Manleys were among the lucky ones. The rear of their car stuck on the edge of the bridge. "We just hung there," Manley said.

"I had a bit of trouble getting out of the car because my door opened over the edge, but we got out through the back door and ran down the bridge as fast as we could," he said.

The 10,000-ton freighter Lake Illawarra, loaded with zinc ore, smashed into one of the bridge's supports, knocking down a 250-foot section of the span. The ship sank within 10 minutes.

Police said two of the vessel's 42 crewmen were missing and feared dead. A spokesman said another 12 persons may have been in the cars that fell into the river.

Police and navy frogmen searched the river bed today for the sunken cars, missing passengers and the lost freighter crewmen.

Not Patty

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A woman police arrested on shoplifting charges Sunday had a Social Security card bearing the name of Patricia Campbell Hearst, the missing newspaper heiress.

The FBI said the woman, identified as Helen Castoni, 26, had simply gone to a local Social Security office several months ago and made an application for a card in the name of Patricia Campbell Hearst.

The FBI said agents interviewed the woman and "they have no further interest in her."

"She has been in our office several times before, if you know what I mean," an FBI agent said.

Gaining

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI) — Tiny Jolene Rene Lange, the only survivor of sextuplets, managed to get her weight up to two pounds, 3/4 ounces by Sunday — the four-week anniversary of her birth.

"Her father was in for a few minutes to hold her," said a nursing supervisor at Valley Medical Center.

When Jolene and her four brothers and a sister were born Dec. 8, she was so small that she weighed only 880 grams. Two pounds are equal to 912 grams.

All but Jolene, the first born, died shortly after birth. Their mother, Mrs. Charlotte Lange, took a fertility drug in hopes of having a large family.

Recuperating

PALM DESERE, Calif. (UPI) — Gen. William C. Westmoreland, former commander of U.S. forces in the Vietnam War, was resting comfortably Sunday following mild heart attack two days ago.

He was reported in good condition.

Westmoreland was stricken Friday night while dressing for dinner at the Palm Springs, Calif., home of Bob Hope.

Subsidies would help

Railroads in comeback?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — America's railroads, on the eve of what should be their finest hour since the traffic crush of World War II, instead may slide into some form of government nationalization during this decade.

On the surface, most of the outward signs appear to point toward a rail comeback. Rail traffic has held steady despite the recession; revenues are up; coal traffic, most of which moves by rail, is skyrocketing; rail employment is growing after decades of decline.

The same Congress which squabbled over loans to Lockheed and which refused subsidies to Pan American World Airways appears ready to offer financial help and regulatory relief to railroads.

Instead of allowing passenger trains to die, Congress established a semi-government corporation —Amtrak—to try to make the trains worth riding again, and instead of allowing the bankrupt Penn Central to be sold for scrap, Congress established a government agency to reorganize all the bankrupt northeastern railroads on a private enterprise basis.

As the most energy-efficient and least polluting form of transportation, railroads — either in private hands or government hands — are assured a future in this country.

With all these factors in their favor, why, then is railroading in trouble, with most of northeastern lines in bankruptcy, rail maintenance deteriorating, rail reliability still low, and railroads crying for rate increase after rate increase?

The most recent major reason — a reason which may send the railroads into nationalization or semi-nationalization — is inflation.

According to the Association of American Railroads, fuel costs alone soared 106 per cent during 1974. Freight cars which cost $18,000 in 1973 are expected to cost $27,000 in 1975. The cost of cross ties rose 45 per cent last year, rail 42 per cent, and car wheels 62 per cent. The latest round of steel price increases will hit railroads hard.

Railroads are not alone in their inflation problems. Airlines have been particularly hard hit by fuel cost increases.

But unlike railroads, the government's attitude toward airlines is not so benevolent. In various actions throughout 1974, Congress and the administration have told airlines to forget about any direct financial help, even if individual airlines face shutdown.

Pan Am, for instance, had a November net loss of $15.7 million, pushing its 11-month loss to $60.9 million. Yet Congress refused to pass legislation increasing international air mail rates, and the administration opposes any Pan Am subsidy.

Part of this anti-airline attitude apparently is caused by dissatisfaction with the Civil Aeronautics Board coupled with the fact that most domestic airlines were reporting record profits at the same time they were receiving huge fare increases.

Air fare increases — 15 per cent in slightly more than a year — have chased many passengers back to the train and bus, and have angered many passengers and officials. These factors, coupled with the general economic turndown, have pushed the volume of air travel below the same period last year.

Amtrak also has been raising passenger fares, but rail passenger traffic has held steady or increased on individual routes as passengers continue to re-discover the train.

Storm warnings also abound for Amtrak, however, as losses mount and present management makes cost-saving cuts in the very services which convinced many people to return to the rails. It appears obvious that Congress must soon decide whether to continue absorbing Amtrak losses as a "for-profit" corporation or to fully nationalize passenger trains and end the pretense that they may some day be profitable.

Freight railroads are managing to maintain about an overall 4 per cent return on investment despite inflation, largely through rate increases, but railroad association president Stephen Ailes says this won't be enough.

"This still is far from the 10 per cent needed to enable the railroads to keep pace with spiraling costs and establish an adequate financial base," Ailes said.

Inflation, of course, is not the only railroad problem. Poor management still plagues the industry except on a few well-run lines, and government regulation of the railroad industry is a classic example of the worst in bureaucracy.

Railroads still face problems with poor reliability and slowness. Many items move by truck or barge today for no other reason than that railroads not only may take a month to deliver a car but often may not even be able to promise which month it might get there. Some major terminals such as Chicago are often burying grounds for rail shipments.

These problems are costing railroads millions and the situation shows no signs of improvement.

Take the case of the massive low-sulfur coal deposits located along Burlington Northern lines in the West, which promises to be a gold mine to the railroad. It seems that Detroit Edison plans to purchase millions of tons of this coal for a new Michigan electric generating plant, St. Clair Shores.

The BN plans to move this coal east in 110-trainload lots, and logically one would expect the coal to move all the way by rail since it is already on the train. No, instead a new loading dock will be built on Lake Superior at Superior, Wis., and the coal will be dumped from the train to a new lake boat for trans-shipment to Michigan.

Trains Magazine, an independent rail-oriented publication, asked Detroit Edison why. The utility said the rail-lake rate was actually lower than all-rail, and that loading the coal on a lake boat would avoid rail congestion in the Chicago area.

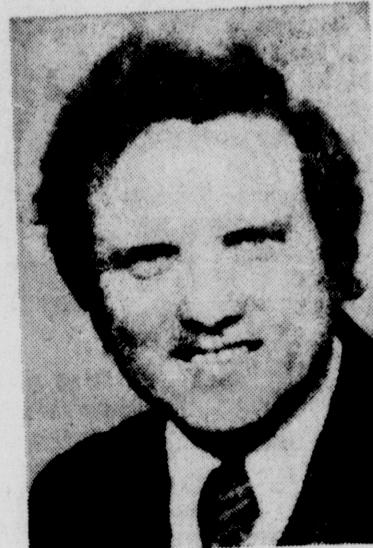

The answers to this deep-seated problem are not simple. Railroads cannot raise fares much higher without losing traffic, but without extra revenue the railroads can't modernize, and without modernization they cannot continue to compete.

Seemingly the only alternative is increasing government involvement and financing. This course is already being followed in the Northeast and Midwest where the new U.S. Railway Association is drawing a new rail map for the region.

Long-term government loan guarantees will be used for the most part, but direct subsidies also will be involved, setting a new precedent. If a local government wants to maintain service on a line which USRA intends to abandon, it can apply for federal matching money to make up the line's losses. The railroad would continue to operate the line, but would absorb none of its losses.

The attempt to find a solution to the northeastern railroad problem may be the test case of whether the rail system can stage a comeback or whether it must be nationalized. If the new system is successful, it will eventually repay its government debt and once again become a private company with its low-volume money-losing operations subsidized.

Why is teacher receiving food stamps? W.H. asks

TOPEKA, Kan. (UPI) — The White House wanted to know why a junior high school art department chairman in Salina, Kan., was getting food stamps even though he made $8,300 a year.

But a special federal investigation has concluded that Blaisdell is indeed eligible for food stamp aid and can continue receiving the stamps as long as his income doesn't go up or expenses go down.

Jack Curry, head of the state office of the Agriculture Department's Food and Nutrition Service, administrator of the program, said his superiors at the Service's Chicago regional office told him the White House staff requested a special inquiry into the case. Curry said copies of his report will go both to the Chicago office and to the White House.

Tony Bill--Hollywood's new somebody

By DICK KLEINER

HOLLYWOOD — I understand someone from the Salina area wrote President Ford about the case and the President — or someone at the White House — became concerned," Curry said.

Blaisdell discovered in December his family of three was eligible for food stamps.

The guidelines for a family his size were for a maximum monthly income of $393, and after deductions for housing and medical expenses, taxes, union dues and other deductions, the net family income ended up at $380 a month.

Consider Tony Bill. His case makes Horatio Alger seem like a pessimist.

He didn't start out penniless. But his career as an actor was floundering. For a few years, back five or six years ago, he was looked on as an actor with promise. But the promise never seemed to materialize.

I first met Tony in Yugoslavia, when he was one of the company filming "Castle Keep." It didn't turn out to be a big film and Tony's relatively small part was overlooked. What always stuck in my mind then was his independence.

The rest of the company clung together, billeted in a lovely old hotel on the shores of the Danube. None of them ventured out and their contact with the Yugoslavs was minimal. But Tony and his family were different. They rented a house in the town—Novi Sad—and Tony's children went to a Yugoslav school and began speaking the language.

He came back from that long location and decided he was tired of acting, that he really wanted to be a producer.

The first film he made, "Deadhead Miles," was never even released, even though Bill had Alan Arkin as his lead. His second, "Steelyard Blues," was released and of the West" star Alan Arkin, wouldn't stay pigeonholed.

found a certain market, but was far from being a hit.

Hollywood is a town which judges people on a very narrow yardstick—you are either a success or a failure. Tony Bill had made two films and neither one of them had amounted to much. He was pigeon-holed as a flop as a producer.

But he kept trying. It wasn't easy, because Hollywood's doors are closed to failures. Tony Bill found a story by an unknown writer and he managed to get a couple of top actors interested in doing it. The project became "The Sting," with Robert Redford and Paul Newman, and suddenly the failure was because it was a great script.

And just this morning, he says, "I am not the reason for my success," he says, with a burst of modesty. "The only reason 'The Sting' was a hit was because it was a great script."

Perhaps alone among producers, because of the way "The Sting" began he will read anything from anybody. He encourages unknown writers to send him material. His next film, "Hearts of the West," is by another unknown, Rob Thompson. It will star Jeff Bridges, Alan Arkin, Andy Griffith, Blythe Danner and Donald Pleasance.

Bill, nothing if not enthusiastic, speaks in superlatives.

"And just this morning," he says, "I remembered something else I want. I had always felt that the height of luxury was to have a phone in my car, and now I think I'll get one."

He says he's also indulging his hobby of antique cars, but looks on that as more of an investment than a luxury. He buys old cars, fixes them up, resells them.

World of animals

Needs of the owner, animal must mesh

By DR. FRANK MILLER
DEAR DR. MILLER: My granddaughter wants an Irish Setter puppy. Is that a good choice? —E.W.

Dear E.W.: Personal preferences in pet picking certainly must be considered. The enthusiasm with which the animal is cared for is often tied to the initial desire or lack of it for this particular pet. On the other hand, the pet should "fit" into that immediate environment. The Irish Setter is a beautiful, appealing dog. It's also one with boundless energy which somehow must be catered to. If the dog was primarily for cuddling, and if little time or energy was available for exercise, an Irish Setter would actually be a poor choice. The needs of the owner and animal must mesh with some degree of harmony. The pet who fits will satisfy its owner the most and, in turn, be the happiest. The greater the compromise required by one or the other partner to make the relationship work, the less likely it is to work. If your granddaughter has the interest, time, energy and space (in order of decreasing importance), the Irish Setter is a good choice for her providing, as always, the puppy itself is a good healthy choice.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our next door neighbor never listened to me when I warned her about getting vaccinations for her cat. My two cats, Mervin, an orange tabby, and Scotch, a black and white shorthair, get their vaccinations every year for distemper and pneumonitis. For the last four years, every time I've taken my cats, I've offered to take hers, too. But she kept saying since her cat stays inside and never goes out, it really wasn't necessary. She knows she's wrong now because her cat just died from distemper and pneumonitis. I would never tell her "I told you so" because I really feel sorry for her. But I wonder how a cat could get both of those viruses. I thought a cat could only get one virus at a time. —S.A.

Dear S.A.: Cats, like other animals, can contract more than one virus at a time. Feline distemper is a deadly disease and the resulting lowered resistance renders the cat more susceptible to a respiratory virus. Survival odds are indeed slim, but there is a chance, especially if the veterinarian can begin intensive treatment early.

Sen. Aiken retiring

Dean of Senate says leaders must confront the economy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George D. Aiken, R-Vt., retiring this month as dean of the Senate, says America's leaders must confront the country's economic problems soon or they will "wake up playing chess across the table from the Aztecs."

He also suggests that Richard M. Nixon might have survived Watergate had he admitted his administration's mistakes instead of trying to cover them up.

Aiken, 82, who still looks like the Yankee farmer he once was, has served 34 years in the Senate, longer than any other present member. He has lived through the Great Depression and the great wars of this century, and has served under seven Presidents. I would never tell her "I told you so" because I really feel sorry for her. But I wonder how a cat could get both of those viruses. I thought a cat could only get one virus at a time. —S.A.

Interviewed in his spartan-like Senate office, which lacks the usual framed photographs and mementos of other politicians, Aiken left it to history to judge the Presidents he has known since Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Best years

He said Dwight D. Eisenhower had the "best years" to serve in the White House. Lyndon B. Johnson was a man of domestic affairs, he said, and got bogged down in Vietnam.

Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy and others made mistakes but stood taller when they admitted them publicly.

"Kennedy said, 'That Bay of Pigs, oh, I was to blame for that.' He wasn't to blame for that, but when he said he was his stocks went right up.

"When Ike said, 'Oh, that U2 was our plane. We got caught,' that ended the discussion right then and there when he admitted it.

"President Nixon could have probably saved himself a tremendous lot of trouble had he taken those tactics."

Aiken believes Nixon knew nothing in advance of the Watergate break-in that ultimately doomed his presidency.

"But, according to the testimony since, he felt it was part of his job to cover it up, protect the ones that actually performed the deed."

"And, so I say, 'Sometimes it's much worse to protect a sinner than it is to commit the sin'—as he's finding out."

Ordinary person

He sees President Ford as "an ordinary, middle-of-the-road, run-of-the-mill person" whose strength lies partly in his ability to mix easily with people and "still be an ordinary man."

Ford's major failing, he said, is promising to balance the federal budget, "knowing perfectly well he can't do it."

"Perhaps one of his strongest points is his wife," Aiken said. "She's excellent."

With a gleeful wink, he added: "They help. Sometimes they get a little bossy." After his first wife died, Aiken in 1967 married Lola Pierotti, his longtime Senate secretary who is many years his junior.

The senator disagrees with those who believe the country's problems today are insurmountable.

"I think we'll pull out this time," he said, eyes twinkling. "But, if we don't watch out, we'll be joining the Aztecs."

Aiken, long a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has a lasting concern over war, and the threat of war.

"Unfortunately," he said, "the threat of war makes very good business for certain industries. I don't need to tell you who they are. But it does."

Sees changes

He foresees important but unpredictable changes ahead in the two major political parties, just as a "new" Democratic party and a new style of government were born with Roosevelt's election in 1932.

"I tell folks, 'Go away and come back in 10 years and you won't recognize our form of government,'" Aiken said.

Needed changes, he said, can be achieved only by the example of national leadership.

"How are you going to tell a fellow that's trying to keep his family going on $6,000 to $7,000 a year that he's got to cut back," Aiken asked, "when the ones that are getting from $40,000 to $100,000 a year are saying, 'We've got to have more'?"

"It won't work," he said.

"We may have it impressed upon us in the next few months," he added, warning that unless government leaders become aware of the problems they face, "they'll wake up playing chess across the table from the Aztecs."

As he looks forward to some Vermont trout fishing this spring, Aiken said he would not judge newly elected legislators until they spend some time on the job.

"New congressmen as a rule don't think too much of seniority," he observed, "but I can say as a senior member, I've never found experience to be a handicap yet."

"They will change, they will change. I just hope that they're reasonable and not too ambitious during their first term, because they'll be surprised how much they can learn in two or four years."

Limbo for homeowners in financing fuss

By PHYLLIS CANNON
P-B Staff Writer.

Problems of home financing have residents of Magnolia Tree Homes in Chino living from day to day in fear and uncertainty.

They moved in in good faith, believing they had been cleared for conventional financing, some as early as last March. Most made minimum down payments of $350.

But, they say, many have not been cleared through escrow and have no deeds to their properties. And, they claim, they are unable to get verification on the status of their contracts.

Now they have banded together and consulted an attorney who, one said, had advised them to make no further payments until the matter can be investigated.

A group of about 40 residents picketed the sales office Saturday morning carrying placards which read "We Want Our Homes", "We Want Homes Not Lies" or "We Want Our Money Back" and "We Don't Want to Move."

Magnolia Tree Homes is situated off Magnolia Avenue between Riverside Drive and Chino Avenue. There are 38 houses in Phase I and 36 houses in Phase II. Bewildered occupants live in houses in Phase I. Construction has stopped on houses in Phase II.

Magnolia Tree Homes was built by El Dorado Homes, a division of Kaiser Era. Wells Fargo Mortgage Co. of San Bernardino is involved in some of the attempted purchases, as is Realty Escrow, Inc., Temecula, Calif.

Houses range in price from $28,950 to $33,950.

Salesman John Shearer said Saturday that "credit is the basic misunderstanding" which has caused the no-deed condition in which potential buyers now find themselves.

He said most of the present occupants were allowed to move in on a minimal conventional financing check, with a minimum low down payment.

A more thorough check, he said, ruled out conventional financing for some, and so FHA financing was offered.

Checking buyers for FHA financing is a very slow process, Shearer said.

This then, is the situation in which many of the occupants find themselves. They have not been rejected as buyers, but they have not been accepted, cleared through escrow and granted property deeds even though their money has been accepted.

Yet, many maintain, they were assured they were cleared for financing when their down payments were accepted. Several sold homes to move into the tract.

"I don't know what we'll do. We're not legal experts," said Terry Shaw at 6001 Rosario Ave., one of the in-limbo occupants. "Really all we want to do is get through escrow and keep our homes."

Mr. and Mrs. John McNeil said they were told they were approved for a VA loan, paid their $350 down and moved in last July 27. "We learned later," said McNeil, "that the houses never had been approved for VA. We moved out Dec. 15, and bought another house. We figure we're just out the $350 and the landscaping we put in."

James E. Heise of 5999 Rosario Ave., carries a thick folder of paper on his house, but no deed. He said when he was told the financing was switching to FHA the price on his house went up from $30,250 to $30,550.

Among those picketing the sales office were Mary Patterson of 6011 Alfrado Ave., Mrs. Carla Armenta of 5963 Rosario Ave., who moved in 10 months ago and still has no deed. Mr. and Mrs. Bob Norton of 6030 Rosario Ave., Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Castillo of 6000 Rosario Ave., Mr. and Mrs. Barry Gunderson of 5975 Rosario Ave., Mrs. Nancy Knapp of 6025 Rosario Ave., Bill McEvoy of 6051 Rosario Ave., Glenn Redding of 5963 Alfrado Ave., and Mrs. Carl Follis of 6041 Alfrado Ave.

They have many common questions: Does it take eight months to qualify for financing? Will we be kicked out? Will we get our money back if we are? Can we be reimbursed for improvements we make?

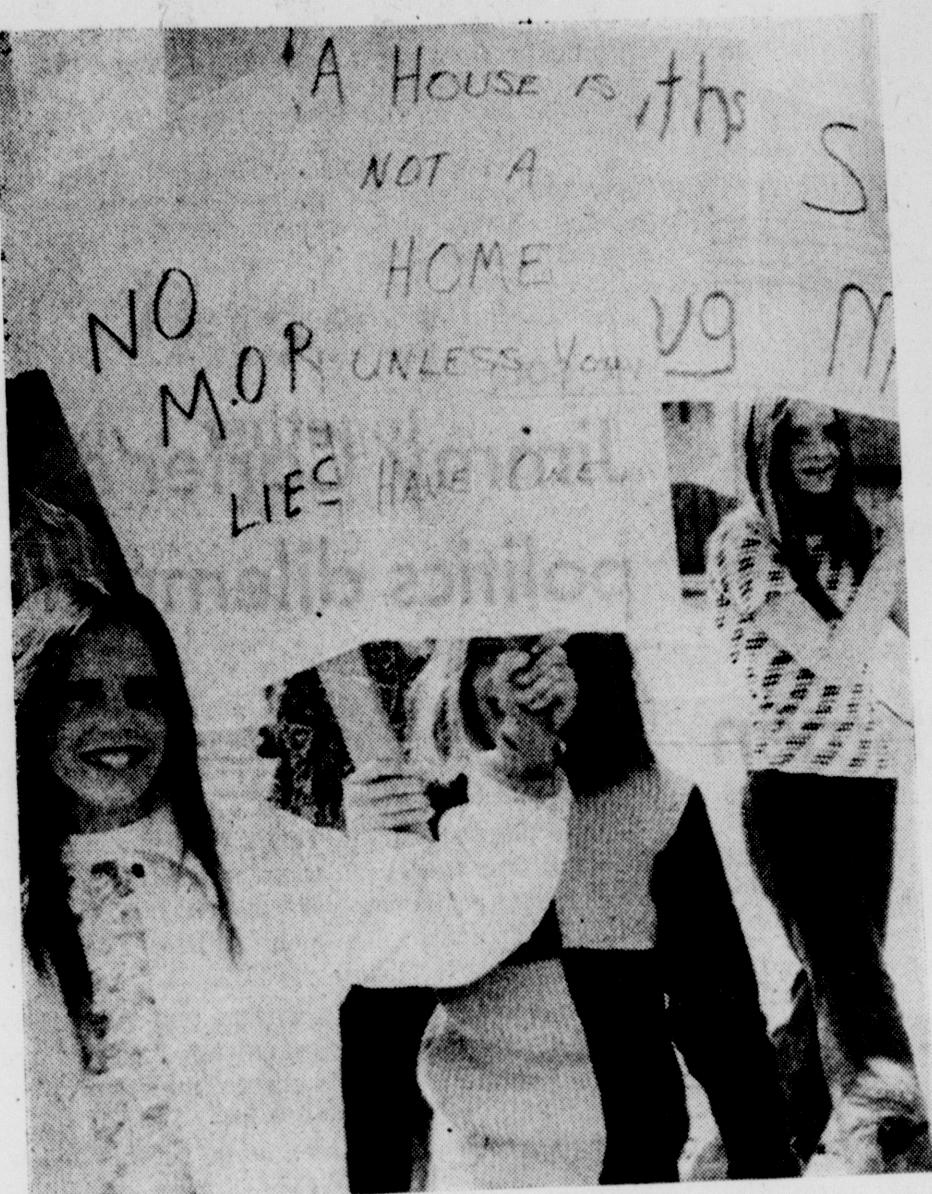

Most of them believe they are qualified for financing and want to live there and keep their homes.

Shearer said no one wants to get the buyers cleared and the houses sold more than El Dorado Homes. "But money is very tight," he said. "No one has been asked to leave, and no one is paying rent."

The company, Shearer said, is losing money every month on the development. "We're waiting for FHA reports. Most of it has to do with financing," he said.

A CLEAR MESSAGE

Young girls surrounded themselves with placards as their parents joined forces to protect uncertainties in ownership of Chino tract houses. They paid their money but have no deeds.

WALKING THE LINE

A young boy, holding tight to Daddy's hand, Saturday walked the picket line in front of sales office of Magnolia Tree Homes in Chino. Lack of financing has buyers in a bind.

Election tomorrow

11 seek Mt. SAC board seat for 3-month term

A special election to select one Mt. San Antonio College District trustee to serve about 12 weeks will be held Tuesday.

There are 11 candidates in the race. Polls will open at 7 a.m. and close at 8 p.m. An estimated 15,000 voters will cast ballots.

Election results may be obtained by calling 595-2211, Ext. 361, Tuesday night.

This is one of the valley's most unusual elections in recent memory. It has drawn the largest number of contestants for a single office in the history of the valley. (Initially there were 13; two withdrew.) It pays nothing.

Those competing for the seat left vacant at the death of trustee Lance D. Smith, are Charles Hall of Diamond Bar, James Popovich and W. William Nash of Pomona, Harry Branscom and Mrs. Hazel Haas of Covina, Royell Storing and Mrs. Leona Bourdet of La Puente, Ralph H. Kimball of Walnut, J. Rodney Davis of La Verne, Ron Borran of West Covina and Travis L. Manning of Hacienda Heights.

The winner will have the advantage of being the incumbent when he or she seeks re-election in regular elections on March 4. The MSAC board will have three vacancies at that time. Terms of trustees Richard Todd of Pomona and William B. Temple of Covina, are expiring. Both seek re-election. A total of 19 candidates filed for the seat in the March 4 contest.

C. DEAN FREUDENBERGER

Theology prof to speak on world food conference

C. Dean Freudenberg, who attended the recent World Food Conference, will speak on the "World Food Conference and America's Challenge" Tuesday at noon at the Claremont University Club meeting at Griswold's.

He will be introduced by Dr. Gordon Michalson, president of the School of Theology at Claremont.

Freudenberg serves as visiting assistant professor of international development studies at the School of Theology.

He has done agricultural consultation and research for the World and National Councils of Churches and for the United Methodist Church.

Fund raising dinner slated

Pomona Valley YMCA central and Claremont branches' Youth and Government group will hold a dime-a-dip fund raising dinner Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in Room C at the Pomona Y.

Delegates participating in the California Model Legislature will present a program on youth and government in high school. Legislation they are taking to Sacramento will be discussed.

Proceeds from the dinner will be used to meet the costs of attending the model legislature. Further information may be obtained by calling 623-6433.

3 southern states hardest hit by flu

ATLANTA (UPI) — Officials at the Center for Disease Control say Georgia, Alabama and Florida are the three states hardest hit by flu at the beginning of the new year.

Dr. John McCoan, state epidemiologist, said Thursday the current incidence of flu in Georgia is 10 times the normal rate, with 1,400 cases reported in the past five days.

Chimney sparks start house fire

Chimney sparks started a fire Saturday night which destroyed the roof and attic of the home of Willie Vaughn at 235 Cucamonga Ave., Claremont.

Claremont firemen were called to the home at 8:30 p.m. A loss estimate has not yet been made, they said.

found several men had been involved in an altercation. Both Winter and another man identified as Thomas Paquet, 29, of Azusa, employed at Boudene's Restaurant, appeared to be injured as a result of the altercation. Officers questioned the two men and learned that earlier in the evening Winter had gotten into a fight with another man inside of the tavern and was kicked out by Paquet.

Lloyd Eugene Winter III of 407 DuPont Ave., Pomona, was listed in fair condition at the Los Angeles hospital awaiting surgery for removal of the small caliber bullet from his lung.

Upland police investigating the shooting said that officers were sent to the tavern about 1:54 a.m. Saturday and quiet was struck over the head with a bar during the fight.

Officers said they made no arrests in the altercation as no one at the time appeared to be severely injured. Winter, according to officers, left and went home. A few more hours passed and Winter discovered that he had been shot and called for an ambulance. Pomona police responded to his home and relayed the information to Upland police.

Upland Police detectives this morning said they still were not certain who had shot Winter during the altercation.

CHP officers: interstate and intravenous

Highway patrolmen at last have found quick takers for something they have to offer.

But it's blood, not traffic citations.

Employees at the Claremont area CHP office, who donate blood regularly during the year, found they had a surplus of 47 pints last December.

Area residents needing blood were notified through newspapers to apply at the area office.

"The response was overwhelming," said Capt. W.C. Jones, area commander. "We had over 100 telephone calls. We could have disposed of 300 pints."

The same offer of free blood was made several years ago. Then it took several days to distribute. "But this time, the blood was given out in only a few hours," said Jones.

Twenty-one employees, including traffic officers and office clerks, are involved in the blood program, said Jones. Each can give up to five pints per year.

Two girl hikers found by deputies

Two Upland teen-age girls were located shortly after midnight today by sheriff's deputies who had searched for them since they were reported overdue from a hiking trip north of Claremont.

The girls, Holly Fox, 14, and Cynthia

Wulf, 15, were found near Evey Canyon by a mountain rescue team from the sheriff's station in San Dimas. Both girls were well.

Deputies were called into the case shortly after 6 p.m. when the girls failed to arrive home from their hike.

Obituaries

Dr. Willis Pierce

Dr. Willis Conway Pierce, 79, chairman of the Pomona College chemistry department from 1945 to 1953 and emeritus professor of chemistry at UC Riverside, died Dec. 23 after a heart attack in Medford, Ore.

A native of Carrollton, Ky., Dr. Pierce became the first professor of chemistry in UCR's College of Letters and Science after leaving the Pomona College faculty. He retired in 1963.

Before joining the Pomona College staff, Dr. Pierce was a member of the University of Chicago faculty from 1928 to 1941 and during World War II, he organized and directed the National Defense Research Commission at the Technological Institute of Northwestern University. He also taught chemistry at the University of Kentucky and the University of South Dakota.

Ernest Piercy

Ernest Piercy of 1464 S. Reservoir St., Pomona, died Saturday in Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Mr. Piercy was born Nov. 16, 1904, in St. Louis, Mo. He came to California in 1956 and had lived in the Pomona area since 1960. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge in Jacksontown, Ore.

He leaves his widow, Susan G.; two sisters, Mrs. Lorene Peterson of Arizona and Mrs. Helen Bartram of Crestline.

Services will be held Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. in Pomona Mausoleum. Dr. Joseph M. Applegate will officiate. William H. Workman of Masonic Lodge 246 will conduct the Masonic ritual. Todd Memorial Chapel is in charge of arrangements.

1975 recreation calendar unveiled

Classes in crewel embroidery, loom weaving and textile techniques, children's music, art for the young, baton and karate, sponsored by the Claremont Parks and Recreation Department, will begin this week.

Oliver Lucas will instruct a karate class at the Youth Activity Center for beginners, intermediate and advanced students beginning Wednesday 7 p.m.

Beginners will meet for three hours each class for five weeks, while intermediate and advanced students meet

Wednesday and Sunday evenings for two hours each class.

Diane Trostle will teach a baton class starting Wednesday at Mountain View School for pre-wees, beginners and juniors.

Boys and girls are invited to become students of Marsie Alexander's "art for the very young" Monday for 10 weeks.

Scott Ray will teach folk guitar Thursdays for beginners, intermediates and advanced students.

Blair Anderson will instruct flute and clarinet Wednesday afternoons beginning Jan. 15 at the Memorial Park community building.

An additional 25 per cent is added to the class fee for non-residents.

Crewel embroidery will begin Thursday at the Memorial Park community building from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

Loom weaving, textile techniques and non-loom weaving will be taught Tuesday, beginning Jan. 14.

Further information on the classes may be obtained by phoning 624-4531, extension 273.

Cycle collision injures one rider

A 19-year-old Los Angeles man was injured slightly Sunday when his motorcycle collided with another cycle, and a third cycle ran over him in a dirt field in Ontario.

Thomas Anferson was riding his cycle in the field near Chino and Arribald avenues at 11:45 a.m. when he collided with a cycle driven by David Mastin, 17, of Los Angeles. Another cycle driven by Anferson's brother, Steven, 20, then ran over him.

The younger Anferson suffered a leg injury. He was treated and released from San Antonio Community Hospital.

EDITORIAL*Opinion*Poor battle plans in survival war

White House aides are misleading President Ford and all of us by not making clear that any realistic solutions to our energy problems will end up costing taxpayers between $100 billion and $200 billion over the next decade. The money will be spent on direct subsidies, tax favors, research and development, demonstration projects, government-approved price increases and special privileges as payoffs for special risks.

These costs will be open, direct and out of the budget, or hidden and reflected in higher energy costs.

Because we are already hard-hit by economic turmoil, Mr. Ford's advisers put off the hard decisions they must eventually hand the President. But the longer decisions are delayed, the more likely an all-out crash program will be required. That would add billions to the cost.

This habit of wishy-washy put-it-off on unpleasant economic matters is the same mistaken policy President Johnson followed in attempting to fight the Vietnam war while postponing payment so as not to disturb the taxpayers. Today we are meeting the cost of Mr. Johnson's shilly-shallying in inflation and recession.

It's now clear this attack on the energy shortage is a war for survival in the strictest literal sense. It is not a war against the Arabs or other world producers, nor a drive for self-sufficiency which is impossible, and if possible would be economically unwise. This is rather a push to achieve enough efficiency in energy use, sufficient savings in conservation and the increase in domestic production needed to make it impossible for any foreign cartel to squeeze us into political or economic submission or to bankrupt us through price rigging.

It is essential, too, that the drive give us sufficient reserve supplies and production potential to provide aid to our primary allies in West Europe and Japan, or the next crisis may find this country isolated, despite the cooperation agreements signed and in prospect. If the United States does not win this war, the results could be as serious politically, economically and for national defense as a Soviet takeover of West Europe.

The problem has been made all the greater by the over-tight monetary policy enforced by Federal Reserve Board chairman Arthur Burns. This severely increased the price of capital and seriously delayed the building of new nuclear and conventional power plants, thus increasing the dependence of this country on foreign oil.

Some major hoped-for energy sources now appear to be far in the future—the utilization of shale oil, for one. The development of a fast-breeder reactor, it is said now, will be more expensive than estimated and will take longer to achieve. Yet that reactor has become a vital necessity as supplies of the major rich deposits of uranium are used up. Necessary, that is, unless we are to become dependent on foreign uranium as we are on oil.

Oil and gas exploration is a risky, costly business, especially in the United States where so many of the easily found resources have been developed. What's needed now is a thorough geological mapping of the offshore areas and of the hodge-podge of wide tracts on the mainland. Even with the assistance of satellite studies, this will be costly. But it will be far less expensive than piecemeal exploration by individual firms without such preliminary work.

In the near future, energy saving can be as profitable as energy development. But the perfection of many types of more efficient equipment is now so costly few companies can afford the research on their own.

The problem now is for President Ford to force a decision on energy, piecemeal if necessary, and get wheels turning because each year, our dependence on foreign oil becomes greater.

Back to the farm

The U.S. Census Bureau has come up with some new figures on the nation's farm population. In April of 1973, it was estimated that there were 9.5 million people on America's farms, and this amounted to around 4.5 percent of the total population. In 1971-72, farmers made up 4.6 percent of total U.S. population. This, it is thought, is an indication that the decline of farm workers may have halted. Also, the Bureau reports that in 1973 only 1.9 percent of farm workers were unemployed, and this compared with a 5.3 percent unemployment rate for the rest of the nation's working force.

It may be that the factory whistle and the city lights are losing their lure for some people, and it is little wonder. In most cities, only those with a death wish would dare walk around the block after dark. And with the price of groceries going up, not to mention the price of everything else too, more people may be getting the idea that a sack of potatoes grown in their own backyard might be pretty handy to have around. As many are discovering, there is much to be said for the slow, even tempo of country life.

THE PUBLIC FORUM*Challenges story on hunter-sportsmen

I was infuriated with the narrow-minded concept of the American hunter-sportsman as expressed by Tom Tiebe in his column entitled "Hunting for 'sport'" in Thursday's Progress-Bulletin.

I seriously doubt whether he has the facts to substantiate his statement that poaching is a way of life in West Virginia.

Unfortunately, however, unsportsmanlike conduct occurs in all sports, be it football, baseball or boxing. Every year there is an account of athletes arrested for drug violations or other crimes.

Hunting is a sport, and when it is done properly it is as rewarding as making a touchdown, hitting a home run, or making a field goal. In any sport, when a player deviates from the rules he should be punished accordingly.

JACK ANDERSON*FBI's counter-intelligence program

WASHINGTON — From the FBI's most secret files, the story has been compiled of the FBI's undercover efforts to "disrupt and distract" subversive and radical groups.

The activities ranged from leaking derogatory material about a congressional candidate to "investigating the love life of a group leader for dissemination to the press."

The undercover operation was known inside the FBI by the code name "Cointelpro," which is bureaucratic shorthand for "counterintelligence program."

We have obtained a 21-page summary, which the FBI has prepared for Atty. Gen. William Saxbe of the super-secret Cointelpro activities.

By the FBI's own admission, "some Cointelpro activities involved isolated instances of practices that can only be considered abhorrent in a free society."

Yet the FBI reminded Saxbe: "It is important to understand that these improper activities were not the purpose or indeed even the major characteristic of the FBI's Cointelpro efforts."

The 21-page document gives no names and only few details. In at least one case, however, we have learned the full story.

During the 1968 presidential inaugural, demonstrators kept in touch with one another by "citizen band" radio. The document tells of "using the same frequency . . . to provide disinformation to disrupt demonstrations. . . ."

The demonstrators had planned to stone President Nixon's limousine and kill him if they could. By impersonating the group's leaders over the radio, however, the FBI caused the demonstrators to assemble several blocks from Nixon's route.

PAUL HARVEY*Hickel sitting on top of the world

Walter Hickel, the truck driver who worked hard, got rich and became governor of Alaska, remained "Wally" to Alaskans.

Then he was "elevated" to Washington, became secretary of our nation's entire interior, "left home." The home folks have not forgiven him for that.

Most governors, appointed to a presidential Cabinet, would be congratulated by their constituents; not in Alaska. They still call him Wally; they still admire and respect him. But this he couldn't even get himself nominated by his own party for his old job as governor.

I'm oversimplifying the resentment which was his political undoing. There is something else: Wally Hickel's perceptivity has so many dimensions that it outgrew Juneau.

He campaigned for governor talking geopolitical theory beyond the comprehension of many and beyond the interest of most. But Walter Hickel is resilient; you will hear from him further.

However, all participants of any sport should not be condemned. In regards to Tiebe's statement that he was once a hunter for many years, it is extremely difficult for me to conceive that, particularly when he confesses to shooting squirrels out of a tree with magnum loads.

I would therefore classify Tiebe with the Vietnam helicopter pilot he mentioned as having shot a tiger in the Vietnam jungles with a 50 caliber gun.

It's quite apparent that Tiebe, the squirrel hunter, did not eat what he shot, as little would have been left of the animal after he shot it with magnum loads.

I do not condone shooting any animal for the sake of shooting it or seeing it die. All game animals that I shoot are cleaned and eaten by my family. I know millions of other hunters will agree there is no finer tasting or better quality meat than that obtained in the wilds, where civilization has not poisoned its basics.

The experience of a successful and adventurous hunt is no different than reading about the exciting win of USC over Ohio State. It's all sport, and good clean fun when done properly.

It should be noted that $107 million dollars a year is contributed by hunters to the preservation and conservation of wild animals, not just game animals. Since 1923, $1.8 billion has been raised for conservation through hunting licenses alone, not including special hunting stamps purchased.

In the same period, how much money has been directed to assist wildlife by anti-hunting groups? Rather than condemning the true sportsman, these groups would serve a better and more useful purpose if they used their resources to assist sportsmen in their conservation efforts.—Al Brabender,

Washington — Ready for yet another columnist's assessment of candidate Jimmy Carter? All right, try this one: he is a personable young man who, without any particular qualification for the job, simply wants to be President of the United States.

J. K. (DOC) PEIRSON*Just in jest

The secret of longevity, according to a 103 year old man, is never to use soap. Suds are all right in their place, he admits, but that place should be in a foaming mug of beer. —Now there's an Old Timer well versed in the fine art of enjoying a long and happy life. How refreshingly different is his philosophy from that displayed by many an Old Timer who frantically resorts to a hair implant, face lift, sideburns open front shirts and high heels in order to prove he isn't an Old Timer. —And here's just another way to determine where you fit in timewise. If you react violently when newspaper sports writers say of one of your earlier day athletic heroes: "He is just another name to this reporter," you, too, have finally become an Old Timer.

VIC GOLD*Jimmy Carter's politics dilemma

WASHINGTON — Ready for yet another columnist's assessment of candidate Jimmy Carter? All right, try this one: he is a personable young man who, without any particular qualification for the job, simply wants to be President of the United States.

Now to play it straight. That's really not my opinion of Jimmy Carter. Readers with a memory for trivia might recall, however, that it was the late Walter Lippmann's assessment of New York Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt in early 1932.

Thus, it seemed as good a way as any to point up what I consider the biggest factor blocking the outgoing Georgia governor's current ambition to become his party's presidential choice.

Carter's problem, you see, is to get his fellow Democrats to take his candidacy with something more than a grain of cornbread salt. Oh, he's serious enough, no question. Twenty minutes with the man, as this reporter recently spent at a breakfast meeting in San Francisco, is sufficient to convince even a skeptic of that fact.

But Jimmy Carter suffers a severe handicap for someone with his ambition. He has a skeleton not in his closet, but in his living room, for all to see and hear.

To the point, the man is a Southerner. Not just a Border State Southerner, either, but a Deep Southerner. And he is running for the presidential nomination of a party dominated, as far as Deep Southerners are concerned, by one of the most bigoted, narrow-minded power elites in American political life.

I refer, of course, to the "liberal" wing of the Democratic party.

For Democratic liberals, Deep Southern politicians who entertain national ambitions fall into three stereotypes. They can be ogres (e.g., George Wallace), or jokes (e.g., Lester Maddox), or domesticated pussycats who gain the approval of the national media at the expense of losing rapport with their own native constituencies (e.g., Carl Sanders, the former Georgia governor whom Carter himself defeated).

Since Carter is neither an ogre nor a joke, there are those at work to convert him to pet pussycat status. He is being patronized with kind words by liberal commentators who marvel at the fact that, though he served as governor of Georgia, the man is no racist.

Some of these observers would like nothing better than to place Carter in the role of what they see as a "New South" answer to Wallace's presidential aspirations. In effect, they're urging, "Let's you and George fight."

And if Carter does well enough in such a fight, then what? Why then they'd push him for Vice President on the national ticket.

But if he's as smart as I think he is, Jimmy Carter will recognize those patronizing blandishments for what they are. He'll refuse to play pussycat's paw for the Northern liberal Democratic faction trying to deal with what they consider their party's "Wallace problem."

For that matter, why should Carter settle for No. 2? To the extent that a third of an hour's conversation can establish such matters, he impressed me as a man with the requisite qualifications to contend for his party's Presidential nomination. Indeed, measured against the Democrats' last nominee, a case can be made that the quick but soft-spoken Georgian is over-qualified.

Walter Hickel, as interior secretary in the Nixon Cabinet, was first to speak out against Nixon's insensitive White House advisers. It got him fired. Time has proved the warning valid. Time always seems to be playing catch-up with Wally Hickel. He was confident of Alaska's future before Alaska was. He bet on it, got rich. He anticipated the practicability of a pipeline from Prudhoe Bay before Alaska. He recognized the indefensibility of our Vietnam involvement before the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.).

Because of his impressive track record as a seer, my wife and I detoured during a recent Alaskan pipeline survey to spend an afternoon in Wally Hickel's "little white house." This modest cottage is an ocean-front hideaway in Anchorage where he escapes from the luxury hotels he owns and the myriad investments he quarries.

Walter Hickel believes the power center of the world will move from the Middle East to the Arctic — and in his time.

Veterans organization arranges transportation

About nine months ago my husband, 43, began feeling "lousy" and losing weight.

Although he had always been a welder with an excellent record, he was unable to get work because he couldn't pass the physical examination.

X rays revealed that he had a congenital back problem and he was considered uninsurable and unemployable.

He went to painting and odd jobs until we were offered the job of manager-maid-maintenance at a motel.

The day after we started he had violent pains and was referred to the county hospital. He returned home but was later admitted to another hospital.

He was released but became too weak to walk and started passing out. He was rushed to the Veterans Hospital in Long Beach. After one look at him, the doctors said he was bleeding internally and immediately began transfusions.

After surgery he came home but was in such pain that he was admitted again. Now he has been released as an outpatient required to return to Long Beach each week.

I quit the motel last month because I just couldn't handle it any longer.

When we made our last clinic call at the hospital, his charts had been lost. To get financial assistance, either through Social Security or the Veterans Administration, we need those charts.

Our car dropped the transmission and we couldn't even get to the hospital today for his appointment. We need help. — Mrs. R. C., Pomona

We called the Disabled American Veterans office and were told transportation could be arranged for you and your husband.

When we got to the hospital, you discovered that your husband's charts had been found.

We offered future help if you ran into further snags.

Two months ago I ordered two pairs of pants from Haband Co., Inc.

There also was a free wallet to be sent with the order. When I received the package it contained one pair of pants and two wallets.

I wrote a letter to the company and received a card stating I would receive prompt and careful attention but I never heard anything.

A week ago I wrote again but still have heard nothing.

A few days ago I read in Action Line that you had solved a problem with Haband for another reader.

I hope you can obtain the pants or a refund for me. — L. W., Diamond Bar.

We did write to Haband but the firm already had sent you the second pair. You are now resplendent in blue checks.

I would like to know who became the heir of my brother's estate.

My brother died in 1972 after two years of ill health. He was paralyzed and unable to talk or write to me for advice.

An old friend of my brother's became his conservator.

When I visited my brother the conservator would never tell me what he did or would do with my brother's personal property, his home, home furnishings and vehicles.

I only presume if my brother had a will made out it was done in the spring of 1972 and only with an X as his signature.

I have not the faintest idea if the estate ever went through probate. — T. W., Chino.

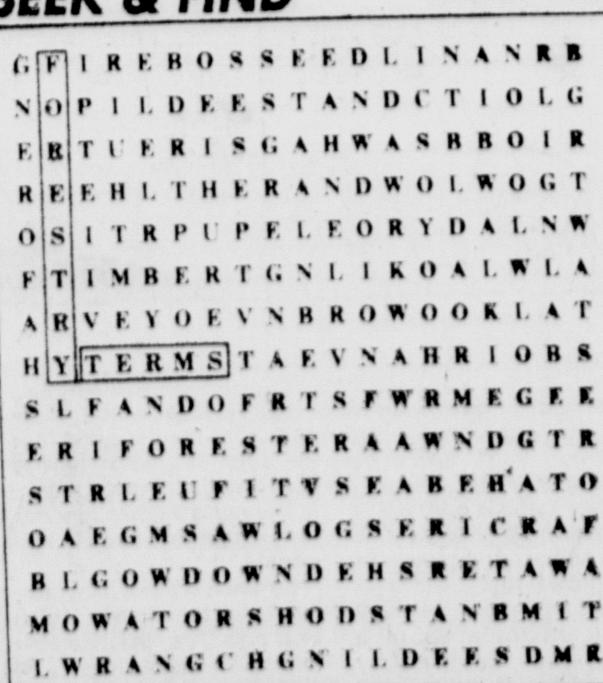

You gave us the name and partial address of the attorney you said drew up the conservator's papers.

With the help of Pomona Library, we obtained the full address. The attorney said he had no information with respect to the disposition of your brother's estate.

He suggested that you check the probate records of the city and county where your brother last resided.

ANN LANDERS

Jolly friends send jolly messages with their jolly Christmas greetings

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Since Christmas is the season to be jolly, I wanted to share a mimeographed note that fell out of a Christmas card. No opinion is needed. I have already tormented my own.

"Dear friend, I thought you might like to know that the doctors removed a tumor the size of a baseball from Gertrude's stomach. It was not malignant, Lord be praised. She is getting along fine. Gert ate a corned beef sandwich last night, her first in years. It looks like we will have a happy 1975, after all. Hope you do, too." (Signature Deleted.) How's THAT for taste? — Philadelphia

Dear Phil: "To each his own," said the lady as she kissed the baboon.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm 44 years old, although I could pass for 35 easy. When my husband died three years ago I went into a depression. My daughter and son-in-law were a great comfort to me. I love them both very much.

I'm ashamed to admit it but I began to love my son-in-law too much. We became involved in a sexual relationship which I thought would end in a few months, but it didn't.

Now I find I am pregnant and don't know what to do. I haven't told my son-in-law, but my daughter has already commented on my added weight. (She has no idea what has been going on.)

Because I am in the menopause I wasn't sure I was pregnant until I went to the doctor yesterday. He confirmed it.

Please, Ann, tell me what to do. — Fran

Dear Fran: Go back to your doctor immediately and ask him what he feels is the best approach to your problem. You should discuss some important facts with him which you omitted from your letter. (1) Would abortion violate your religious principles? (2) Would it be safe at this time? (3) How would you, a widow, feel about raising a child without a husband?

I strongly advise against revealing the identity of the child's father should you decide to have it. Such a revelation would almost surely ruin your daughter's marriage and create endless problems. Good luck to you. You'll need it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last night I heard my husband laughing and asked him what was so funny. He said, "That Ann Landers is something else!" So I read the column, and now I'm writing — something I never thought I'd do.

I've been married 40 years, raised three children of my own and several relatives. Our kitchen has always been a happy place. I've seen tiny tots on chairs frosting cookies, teen-agers making fudge, and college boys broiling hamburgers. I have also stood in that kitchen for hours, cooking for neighbors who have had a death in the family.

We have a rule in our house. If you are too busy to do the dishes, don't worry — somebody will do them. The rule works and nobody gets mad.

This morning when my husband left for work he gave me an extra kiss and said, "Thanks for your messy kitchen." I know what he meant. My kitchen looked like a tornado had hit it, because I've been busy with a relative's sick child. Those silly dishes can wait. They aren't people who need love. — Michigan

Dear Mich: People ARE more important than things, but your "standing rule" wouldn't work in most families. They'd run out of clean dishes and somebody would always be mad.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers's booklet, "Marriage — What to Expect" will prepare you for better or for worse. Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Illinois 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

If a married man has an even slightly suspicious mind, he may pause to wonder how all these Herculean labors get accomplished when he isn't on vacation. From the way his helpmeet tells it, the vacation has arrived just in time for him to save the home from crumbling into ruin. But when he's not on vacation card tables get returned to the Drakes, shirts get picked up, and there is an ample supply of No. 6 grey silk thread.

Sort of makes a guy wonder whose vacation it is.

Taking a vacation from vacations

BY JOSEPH H. FIRMAN

A vacation is all things to all men—and their wives. Unless you are going to take a trip, you might as well not take a vacation.

On a regular vacation you can go to the mountains or the beach, take a motor trip, tour interesting geographical and historic sites. There are many things along the way to interest the Ms of the house. The only thing interesting on a vacation at home is her husband.

The minute she hears you are going to take a week's vacation "to get your battery recharged," her eyes light up like a kid in a candy store. She takes out a pencil and begins making a list of all the chores that need doing around the house, the things she has wanted you to "get at" for months. Vacation doesn't mean doing nothing—it means doing DIFFERENT things. And more of them. By the end of the week you are glad your vacation is over.

You are looking forward to getting back to work to get your batte-

Q. HOW DOES A TURTLE GET INTO ITS SHELL?

A. TURTLE IS BORN WITH A SHELL, AS THE TURTLE GROWS, THE SHELL GROWS, TOO!

All turtles hatch from eggs. The mother turtle lays the eggs in a hole she has dug. She then leaves them.

A baby turtle is born with a shell just the right size for its body. As the turtle grows, its shell grows, too.

The hard shells of most turtles are made up of a "bony box" covered by horny plates. A turtle can't crawl out of its shell. The shell makes up much of a turtle's skeleton, and is firmly attached to its body.

Turtles are well-protected by their shells. Some turtles, such as the box turtle, can pull their heads, tails, and legs into their shell when frightened. Then, very few enemies can get at them.

Here's wonderful news! A pocket radio, camera, World Almanac globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1335 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.

Brian Winters proves hero in Lakers' win

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — Coach Bill Sharman has tried 10 different starting line-ups this season to try to find something that will work for the struggling Los Angeles Lakers.

But how do you plan for a little-used rookie guard who sinks a 35-foot jump shot with two seconds to go in the overtime period to give your team a 112-109 victory?

Astros' pitcher, son found dead

HOUSTON (UPI) — Homicide detectives today tried to piece together events leading to the carbon monoxide poisoning deaths Sunday of Houston Astro pitcher Don Wilson and his 5-year-old son.

Wilson's wife, Bernise, and his 9-year-old daughter were overcome by carbon monoxide fumes and hospitalized. Mrs. Wilson also had suffered a broken jaw.

Juvenile Officer T.L. Trinkle said Dr. F.M. Rivers Jr. of Memorial Hospital Southwest told him Mrs. Wilson gave varying accounts of how her jaw was broken.

At first, Trinkle said, she told Rivers she did not know how it was broken. Then she said she might have been struck and finally she said she had fallen against a wall a few days earlier.

"That's being investigated now," said Det. Doc Fults. "We don't have any other information yet. Detectives are at the house now."

A preliminary investigation indicated the deaths were accidental, officials said, but that was not conclusive. An autopsy report was expected by late afternoon.

Wilson's body was found in the garage slumped over a reclining seat on the passenger side of his sports car. The ignition was turned on, but the engine was not running.

Police believe Wilson, 29, drove into his double garage at 1 a.m. Sunday and shut the garage door with an automatic door closer. Police said the garage was tightly sealed.

Authorities said fumes from the car's exhaust seeped into the master bedroom above the garage where Wilson's son, Alex, was asleep and into an adjoining bedroom where his daughter, Denise, slept.

It was not known where Mrs. Wilson was at the time, but police said she did call a neighbor between 1 a.m. and 1:30 a.m. and said she needed help. She was taken to Southwest Memorial Hospital where authorities said she was in shock but in fair condition. Denise was taken to Texas Children's Hospital in critical condition.

Authorities also said they did not know how Mrs. Wilson's jaw was broken.

"That is all we know," the homicide spokesman said. "An autopsy has been ordered. Perhaps more on the death and Mrs. Wilson's injury can be released today."

The hospital spokesman said Wilson and his son died of "toxic material — carbon monoxide."

Wilson, a righthander known primarily for his fastball, broke into the major leagues with the Astros in 1967 and posted a 10-9 record and a 2.79 ERA. During his career, he pitched two no-hitters — a 2-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves in 1967 and a 4-0 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in 1969.

Wilson came close to hurling a third no-hitter last season when he went eight innings against the Cincinnati Reds without allowing a hit. However, he was deprived of a chance to complete the no-hitter when manager Preston Gomez, with his team trailing 2-1, yanked him for a pinchhitter in the Astros' half of the eighth.

"I respect Preston Gomez as a manager," Wilson said after the game. "I respect him more than ever tonight. He wants to win and I want to win as much as he does."

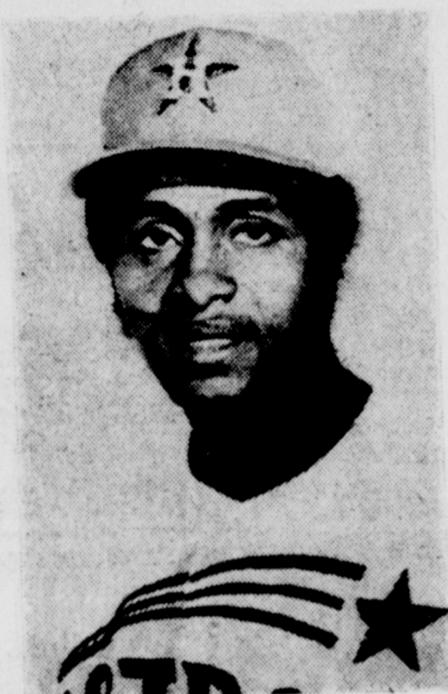

"When people start putting personal goals ahead of the team, you'll never have a winner. I understand how Preston feels. He is consistent and I have

Johnny Miller to be honored

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (UPI) — Johnny Miller, winner of eight PGA tournaments and a record $333,021 last year, will be honored as Pro Golfer of the Western sportswriters and broadcasters tonight.

The 27-year-old slender blond from San Francisco is scheduled to be feted at a dinner at the La Costa Country Club.

Miller, who won the first three events of the 1974 PGA trail, is the defending champion at the $150,000 Phoenix Open in Phoenix, Ariz., this week.

DON WILSON
... dies at home

nothing but admiration for him."

Tom Griffin, another Astros pitcher and Wilson's closest friend on the team, remembered seeing Wilson in the locker room after that game.

"He didn't talk to anybody after that," Griffin said Sunday. "But he understood completely why Preston did it and everybody else did, too. Preston was getting paid to win ballgames."

"There was no problem whatsoever."

Wilson, although he won 15 or more games three different seasons, never fulfilled the potential the Astros had predicted for him when they signed him as a free agent in 1964. Although he posted impressive strikeout totals, injuries often curbed his performance and his eight-year record with the Astros was only 103-92.

His best season was 1971 when he went 16-10, struck out 130 and posted a 2.45 earned run average. Last year he was 10-13 with a 3.07 ERA.

Wilson also had the reputation of causing dissension on the team, but Griffin defended his friend.

"He was misunderstood by a lot of people," Griffin said. "I got to know him real well. He was one of the finest people I ever met."

"I don't think at any time he was a troublemaker. He was outspoken, but a lot of ballplayers are. People misunderstood him and his outspokenness for being a troublemaker. He was not."

Skiing accident kills member of U.S. team

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. (UPI) — Jeff Wright, 22, a member of the U.S. Nordic Ski Team, died Sunday when he lost control during a practice jump and plunged head first into the side of Harri's Hill.

Wright, a native of Minneapolis, Minn., was practicing for the final event of the New Year's jumping series later in the day when the incident occurred.

Wright reportedly began the 70-meter jump without difficulty but then twisted in flight, with his body and skis going in opposite directions.

He was taken to Brattleboro Memorial Hospital and transferred to Mary Hitchcock Hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival. Preliminary reports indicate Wright died of a broken neck.

The other six members of the U.S. team and several other competitors pulled out of the event, which was held from a lower starting place on the jump in an effort to prevent further accidents.

Wright, a junior history major at University of Minnesota who had been jumping for 14 years, had remained in the U.S. while the rest of the American "A" team was practicing in Europe. He joined the U.S. "B" team in 1973, moving up to the "A" team last year. His best finish in 1974 was a fourth at Eau Claire, Wis.

That's what happened Sunday night when the Lakers snapped their three-game losing streak with Brian Winters' shot beating the tough Washington Bullets, the NBA's Central Division leader and the league's winningest team this season.

Winters, 22 and Los Angeles' top choice in the 1974 draft, only got into the game because starting guard Lucius Allen fouled out.

"I still have faith in Winters," Sharman said.

The rookie from South Carolina only took four shots in his brief playing time, but made good on all of them.

Baskets by Winters and center Elmore Smith gave the Lakers a 109-107 lead with 16 seconds to go in the overtime. Elvin Hayes tied it with a jumper with seven seconds left, though, and Los Angeles called time out to set up the last shot.

When the Lakers were unable to work the ball into position for a good shot, Winters banged in his 35-footer two seconds before the buzzer.

"I don't like not playing," said Winters, a New York native, "but I'm trying to accept it. When you don't play you lose your shooting rhythm."

"But, I've worked hard in practice and in warmups to keep my shooting touch."

It was Washington's third straight setback, but the club still has the best record in the league this season with a 28-12 mark, and is a comfortable 4½ games in front of second-place Cleveland in the Central Division.

The Bullets' Mike Riordan topped all scorers with 34 points, while Stu Lantz, filling in for injured guard Gail Goodrich, led Los Angeles with 25 points. Forward Happy Hairston also hit a season-high 19 points and grabbed 19 rebounds for the Lakers.

Los Angeles, in the Pacific Division cellar with a 16-22 showing, moves into the toughest part of its season Tuesday night, embarking on a five-game road trip.

The Lakers will play Buffalo, Philadelphia, Boston and Washington with only a day of rest to finish out the week.

Washington is idle until playing the Suns Wednesday night in Phoenix.

Garey favored in eight-team scramble

SAL cagers open title bids Tuesday

By KEVIN CLOE
P-B Staff Writer

Now the mad scramble begins in Valley high school basketball action.

The eight San Antonio League cage teams open their bids for a league championship Tuesday afternoon after spending the month of December in non-league and tournament competition.

Garey, a heavy favorite to win the SAL title for the third time in four years, will open against a surprising Damien club in the Viking gymnasium.

Ganesha, the defending league champions, will host a Montclair club which always seems to come to life in league play.

Claremont, which was denied a CIF playoff berth last year after finishing in a tie for third with Garey, will try again this season by visiting a troubled Pomona club for the opener.

Chino, steadily improving as was evidenced in its own tournament a week and a half ago, begins by hosting a struggling Upland five.

All games are scheduled for 4:45 p.m. opening tipoffs, just after the completion of the junior varsity contests.

In non-league play this season, the SAL teams have compiled an impressive 58-36 record, which converts to a 61.7 winning percentage.

Of course, Garey sports the best pre-league slate with an 11-1 mark. The Vikings, with four of their five starters returning from last year's club, have won championships in the Upland-Montclair and Orange Tournaments and claimed the consolation title in the San Dimas Tournament of Champions.

Their only loss of the year came against defending Northern California champion Oakland Tech at the T of C.

Senior forward Delbert McDonald paced the Vikings through December, averaging 18.1 points per game. The 6-foot-4 veteran was placed on all three all-tournament teams, while being named the Most Valuable Player at the Orange Tourney. He would have probably been named the MVP of the Upland-Montclair classic, but one was not selected.

The other Viking forward is steady junior Gary Carpenter. The 6-foot-4 returning letterman has averaged 12.9 points an outing.

The Garey center is 6-foot-5 David Larry, who has tremendous leaping ability. Larry lately has been playing up to his potential, and Viking coach Mike Wells feels that the two-year starter is the nucleus of the team's attack.

He has only averaged 9.8 points per game, but has scored 13 markers in his last two outings.

The Garey guards are Billy Evans and Kent Jordan. Evans has gotten off to a slow start and averaged 9.9 points a game, while Jordan got his first starting role in the Tournament of Champions and has potted an average of 12.5 markers an outing.

Damien emerged from non-league play with a 9-3 record, with veteran guard John Pignotti leading the way. Pignotti is averaging 15.4 points.

The Spartans will have one of the toughest schedules to open league play with, facing Garey and Claremont in the first week.

"If we can come out of that first week without shell-shock, we might get through the season in good shape," stated first-year Damien head coach Bill Roberts.

Boyd not happy by USC's play entering Pac-8

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — University of Southern California, hoping to end UCLA's eight-year reign as Pacific-8 basketball champion, launches its conference schedule at home Friday night against Washington State.

The Trojans host Washington Saturday night.

USC coach Bob Boyd wasn't happy after his Trojans beat Furman University 91-84 Saturday night to improve its record to 10-1.

"At times, I think we're a little better than last year before starting league play," he said.

"But at others, it isn't so obvious. I think the conference games will put more intensity in our play but it probably will in the others' play, too."

Clint Chapman scored 22 points and Biff Burrell added 21 for the Trojans against Furman.

Tennis league plans meeting

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — World Team Tennis, which is scheduled to launch its second season in May, will hold a league meeting next Friday and Saturday.

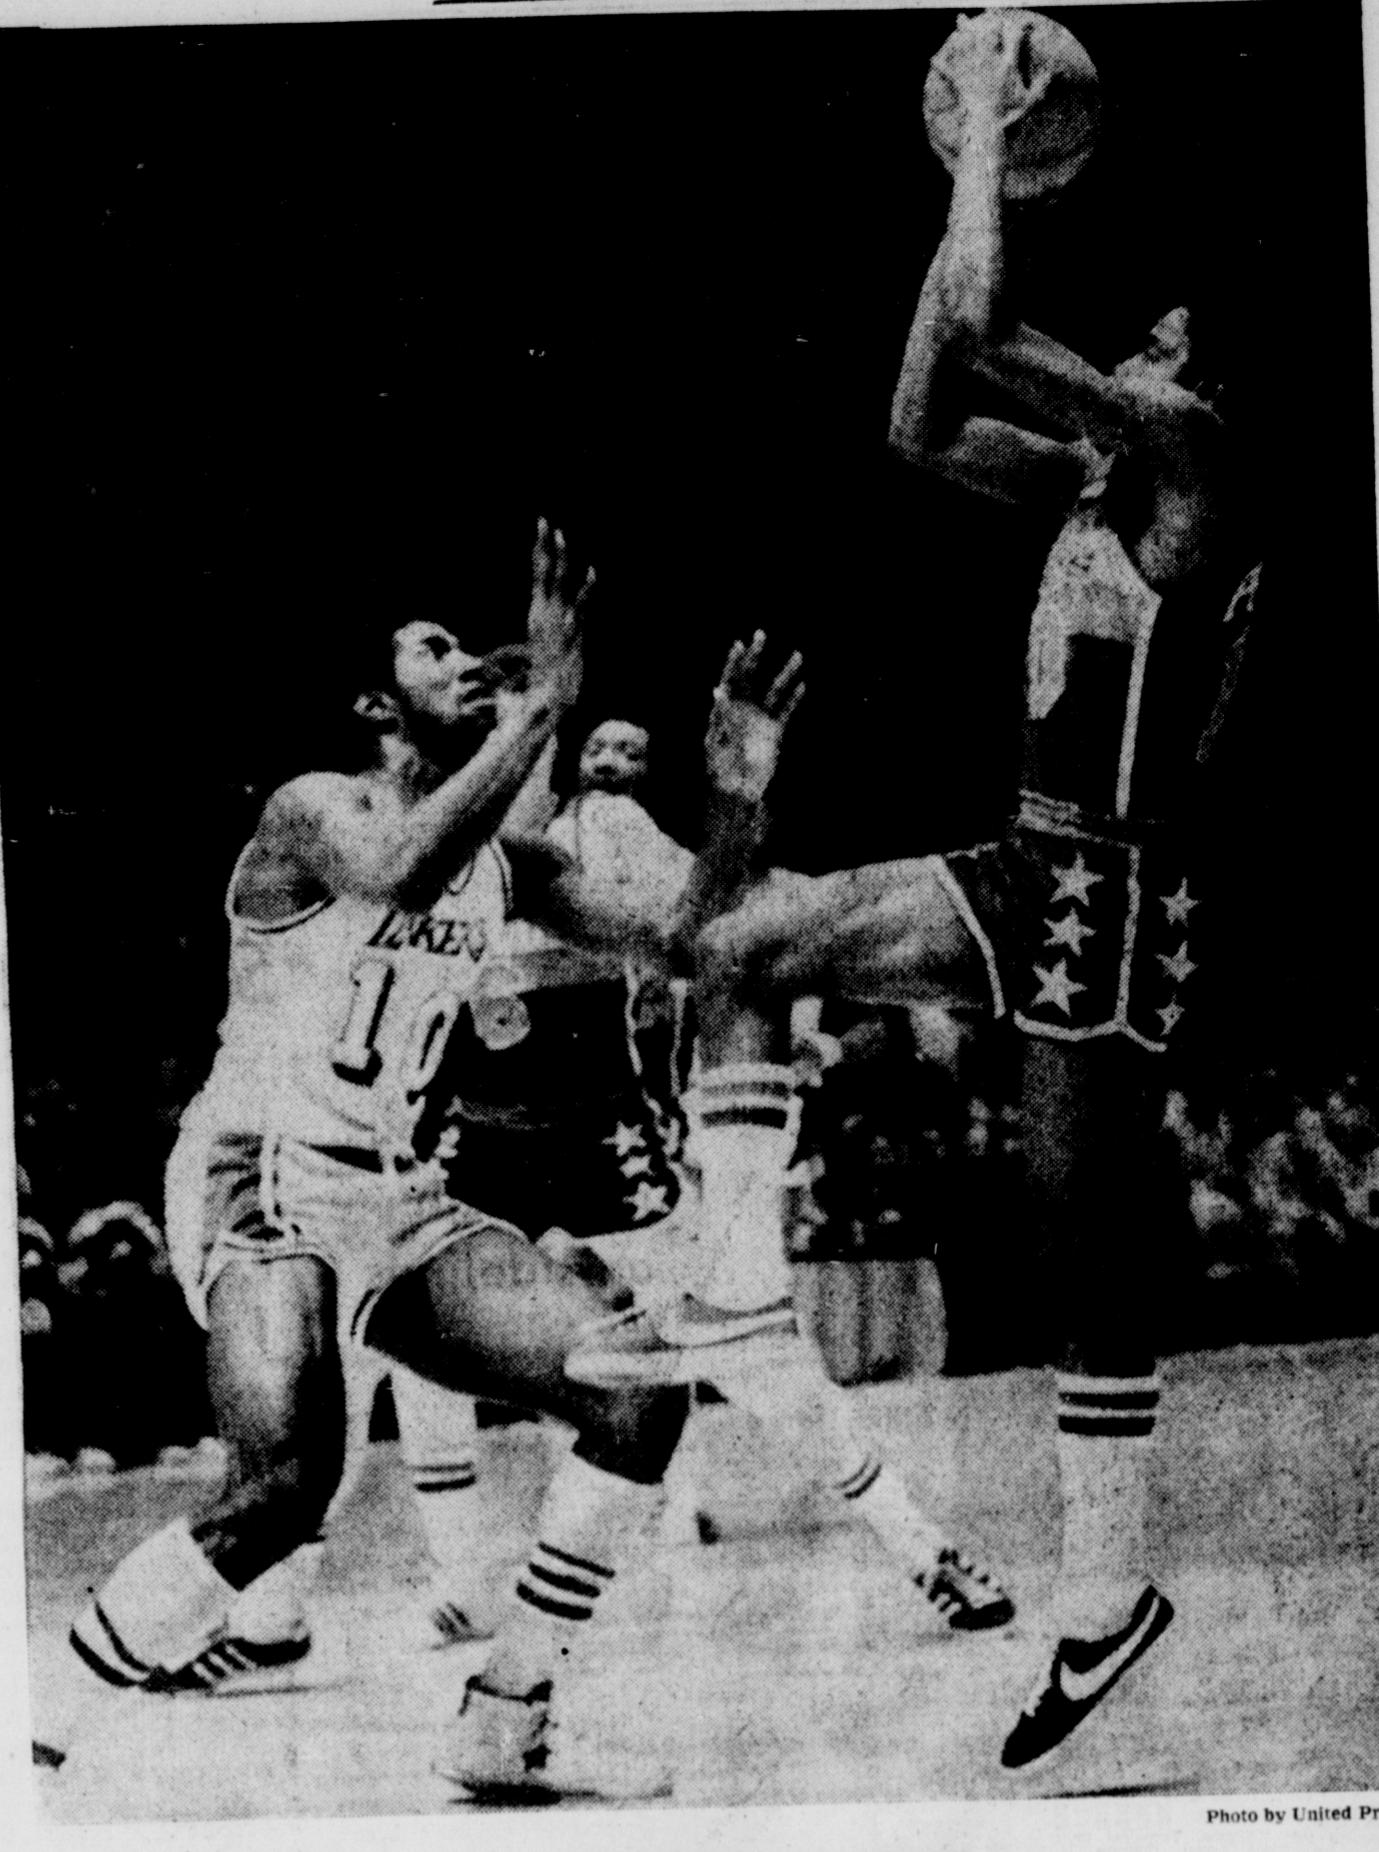

To be decided at the two-day meeting at the International Hotel will be what cities will compete in the league this year.

CAUGHT HOOKING

Tom Clement (10) of the Philadelphia Flyers draws a two-minute penalty when he was caught hooking Seals' Len Frig (6) during Seals' 5-1 victory Sunday night in Oakland.

TIMES JUMP PERFECTLY

Laker Corky Calhoun times his jump perfectly as he goes up to block the shot by Washington's Kevin Porter. The Lakers went on to defeat the Bullets, 112-109, in an overtime game Sunday night.

EAST LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Forrest Fezler almost sat out the Confidence Open Golf Tournament, but his friend Bob Wynn talked him into entering.

Lucky for him. Not so lucky for Wynn.

Fezler broke par for the fourth straight round Sunday to win the event and a $10,000 first prize. Second place went to Wynn.

All the suspended players will be back in uniform for tonight's Big Ten contest here against Ohio State. Their absence from the lineup Saturday resulted in a lopsided 107-55 loss to undefeated Indiana.

"It's just a matter of two lovers being separated for a short period of time," Ganakas said Sunday, following a 2½-hour meeting with the Spartans' game with second-ranked Indiana.

Now that 1975 is here it's a beautiful time to be at Home! No matter what lies ahead in these uncertain times, there are nice things you can be sure of at America's Largest savings and loan association.

HAPPY NEWS FOR SAVERS

No matter what the speculative investor does in 1975 (and judging from '74—it could be hard on the nerves), savers will keep on making money at Home Savings. And while they're doing it, their principal will be safe. Safe because Home backs savings with assets over  $5\frac{1}{4}$  billion dollars. Safe because savings are insured by a Federal agency to \$40,000 for an individual...to \$560,000 for a family of 4!

OK, so your savings are safe at Home, but what about growth? The least you can earn at Home is  $5\frac{1}{4}\%$  with a day-in to day-out Passbook Account (compared to  $4\frac{1}{2}\%$  at most banks). Other types of accounts let you earn much more.

Now, for example, in addition to the popular  $7\frac{1}{2}\% 4$  to 10 year Term Account, Home offers the brand new  $7\frac{3}{4}\% 6$  year Term Account, \$1000 minimum. Leaving interest to compound daily, the effective yield is 8.06%!

$1,000 grows to
$1,591.93 in 6 years
$10,000 becomes
$15,919

As always, Federal regulations require substantial penalties for early withdrawal, but leave your account intact and your money doubles in less than 9 years.

HAPPY NEWS FOR HOME-BUYERS

Home is Number 1 in savings...Home is Number 1 of all associations in loans, too. Despite the tight money market in 1974, Home Savings led the industry in lending on homes, apartment houses and selected commercial and industrial property. It's a pretty sure bet that whatever the housing situation in 1975, Home Savings will be up in front this year, too. If you'll be shopping for real estate, be sure to talk things over at Home—an equal housing lender.

HAPPY NEWS FOR SILVER CIRCLE MEMBERS

A whole slate of exciting new travel trips are scheduled for 1975...including tours to Hawaii, Alaska, the Caribbean, Australia and Europe! All Circle members are eligible...all savers are eligible for Silver Circle when they open or increase their accounts to $5000 or more. Of course, travel trips are just a part of the excitement of belonging to the Silver Circle. There are shopping services...introductions to special insurance programs...free checking accounts...and much, much more. Stop by your local Home office and discover how easily you can start enjoying the extra special benefits of the Silver Circle!

HAPPY NEWS FOR BUSINESS

Home's new H.O.T. Line Accounts...by putting idle cash-flow funds to work...are real money-makers for business firms. And for the self-employed or professional, Home offers complete assistance in developing—absolutely free of charge—a retirement plan under the expanded HR-10 Keogh regulations offering tax deferred advantages. Ask for details.

HAPPY NEWS FOR COMMUNITIES ALL OVER CALIFORNIA

In 1974, Home Savings was privileged to open new offices in many towns and cities throughout California. In Menlo Park, we are now able to offer the services of America's Largest in a cozy new office nestled in a clump of ancient trees. In San Mateo, Home now has a beautiful new landmark office. In Newport Beach, Home is now serving customers in the famous Fashion Island Shopping Center. In 1975, we are looking forward to many new opportunities to bring America's Largest to more Californians in more communities.

HAPPY NEWS FOR YOU

Whatever your goals in 1975, saving for a home or a major purchase, investing for the long haul, strengthening your business for maximum efficiency and income during difficult times, or planning for retirement, you'll find no financial institution pays more on insured savings, and many do not offer as much in either interest or services as Home Savings. You'll also find the all important extra that Home has offered savers since 1889—"Peace of Mind."

Come in soon, and talk things over.

Susan Williams wed in Baptist ceremony

In an afternoon ceremony at the First Baptist Church, Miss Susan Anne Williams and Ward Testerman were married.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Williams of La Verne and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Testerman of Claremont recited their vows before the Rev. Larry Bailey and the father of the bride, who gave the vows.

The bride wore a can-can-style gown fashioned with a fitted bodice, long sleeves and an A-line skirt with a chapel train. The gown was enhanced with alencon lace appliques.

A cap of matching lace held the bride's French illusion veil. She carried a cascade of white miniature carnations and pink roses with baby's breath.

Mrs. Patti Pierce was matron of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids were Miss Gena Gilbert, Mrs. Sandi Martins and Mrs. Kathy Williams, sister-in-law of the bride.

Carrie Pierce was flower girl.

The best man was Dr. Michael Driver while ushers were Bill McIntyre, Bob Stroud, Larry Epstein and Shell Williams.

A reception at the church followed the rites.

The newlyweds will reside in Claremont after their honeymoon.

August nuptials charted

Miss Marie Francine Mead and Edward R. Goff will be married on Aug. 23.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Mead of Pomona, the bride-elect graduated from Pomona Catholic Girls High School. She is employed at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Mr. Goff is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo F. Goff of Pomona. He is a graduate of Ontario High School and Chaffey College where he majored in accounting.

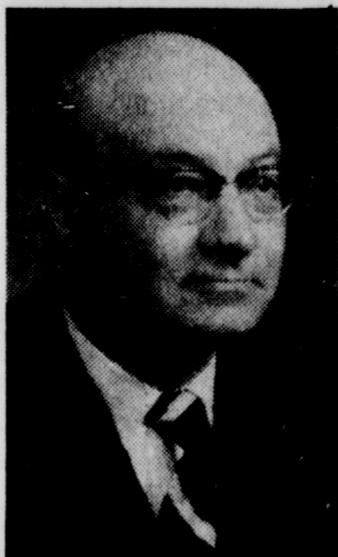

Carrie Pierce was flower girl.

The best man was Dr. Michael Driver while ushers were Bill McIntyre, Bob Stroud, Larry Epstein and Shell Williams.

A reception at the church followed the rites.

The newlyweds will reside in Claremont after their honeymoon.

A cap of matching lace held the bride's French illusion

Alcohol damages furniture

Perfumes, medicines, beverages and other liquids containing alcohol can quickly cause irreparable damage because alcohol has a tendency to dissolve the finish of your wood furniture. Always wipe up such spills as quickly as possible. If the finish has been protected with wax, immediate attention may prevent a spot. But if damage does occur it is often possible to make repairs. One method is to dip your finger in a liquid or paste floor wax used for wood, or in linseed oil, silver polish or even moistened cigar ash, and rub over the damaged area. Then re-wax with furniture wax.

Facing retirement

By DR. JOYCE BROTHERS

DEAR DR. BROTHERS: I'm 60 and facing early retirement. I can't tell you how much I dread it because I've always had a terrible fear of growing old. I used to think, when I was in my 30s, that I'd kill myself rather than ever get old and senile. I've never married but I'm fortunate in having lots of friends my age and I realize that they don't share my obsessive fears about aging.

It is a common belief that senility arises as a result of degeneration of the brain. Autopsies have proved that nearly all old people have the same number of hemorrhages, scars, soft spots and so on, whether they had been senile or alert. Thousands of men and women in their 80s, 90s, and 100s are keen witted and vigorous, according to Dr. Stoneycpher. The qualities of one's later life grow out of the choices the individual makes.

Senility, which you fear so much, often is a psychological condition brought on by a feeling of boredom and uselessness. This frequently begins to appear at the time of retirement. It would be most beneficial to you now to make immediate plans for what you want to do after you retire from your present position. You may wish to prepare yourself for a second career in a field that has always interested you; you may wish to take some courses in a hobby you have always wanted to

Bravo-McNutt rites solemnized in church

Miss Sandra Jean McNutt and Phillip Bravo were married in an evening service at the Pomona First Church of God.

The Rev. A.G. Abrego performed the double-ring rites uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dean McNutt of Pomona and the son of Mrs. Jean Bravo of Chino.

The bride's gown featured a Spanish infant silhouette with a bodice and fitted sleeves of satin organza. Roses adorned the portrait neckline and wrists.

Her cathedral-length veil was attached to a full circle Juliet cap of satin organza with lace trim and seed pearls. The bride carried a cascade of white roses and baby's breath.

Miss Cindy Abrego was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Addine Werner, Miss Jennifer Jackman and Mrs. Stella Reyes.

Michelle Guthrie and Jessica Reyes were flower girls and Benny Chilibolost was ring bearer.

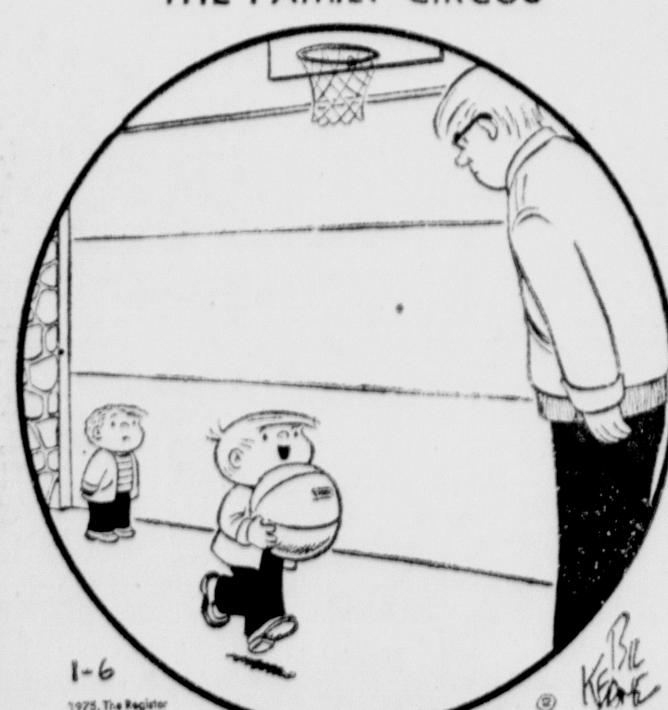

Frankie Bravo was best man. Ushers were Robert Orozco, Randy McNutt and Tommy Reyes.

After a reception at The Arbor restaurant, the newlyweds departed for a honeymoon at Big Bear.

Nut meats help

Nut meats or linseed oil may provide enough coloring to hide a minor scratch on your wood furniture. Break the nut meat of a Brazil nut, black walnut or butternut in half and rub well into the blemish. Linseed oil on a clean cloth may also help.

investigate or you might want to study a language in preparation for a trip.

The danger of retirement for both men and women is that many equate their identity, their sense of worth, directly to their jobs. This often results from the confusion many share that somehow we are what we do. This is not true. Each of us has quite a separate identity and this identity should be strong and resilient enough to withstand many exterior changes. The identity shouldn't be jolted or threatened by a move to a different place or from one job to another or from one country to another.

You are fortunate in having friends and in the fact that you do indicate that in spite of your fears about aging, you must enjoy good mental health. That you recognize your fears and want to overcome them is in your favor. This is the time to do it—not after you have retired. Try to look on retirement as a new and exciting adventure with yourself as the boss and director of your own life.
